The Television Scene

Meet the Bugaloos

Allen Rich

Sid and Marty Krofft, who began their show business careers as puppeteers and first won national acclaim with their Les Poupees de Paris, a sexy puppet extravaganza which played at P.J.'s in Hollywood and indeed all over the world, are now deeply immersed in television production.

Their first effort was H. R. Pufnstuf (NBC) and this they are following with something called Bugaloos, a contemporary comedy-fantasy adventure series for young people, inlaid with the music of today.

The series joins the NPC Saturday morning lineup this fall.

It was with some trepidation that I accepted an invitation to meet the Bugaloos, a group of four teenage musicians from England, at Paramount Studios last Wednesday evening at the conclusion of the first day's taping. I would not compare the assignment with, say, watching the Dodgers or Angels in a doubleheader. My alarm mounted when told that the Bugaloos might well become "the logical successors to The Monkees."

But, you go where you think there may be a story and in this I was not disappointed. As a matter of fact it is a remarkable story.

But let's begin at the beginning.

The Krofft's, tiring of bad news headlines concerning young people decided to produce a "do good" series. They titled it The Bugaloos. They hence appropriately named the four characters in the group Joy, I.Q., Harmony and Courage.

Pleasing Theme

The setting would be the isle of Tranquility and the kids would dedicate their lives (each episode) to helping those who needed help.

As their protagonist, the Krofft's added Benita Bizarre, an evil rock witch who with her bad guy followers lives in a noisy juke box. Martha Raye, who in real life is most certainly a good guy, was prevailed upon to portray Benita.

NBC liked the message implied by the show and bought it.

But now came the real problem for the Krofft's. Although they'd sold the show, they hadn't found the kids who would be the Bugaloos!

And without Bugaloos there'd be no show. Making the task more difficult was that four definite types had to be found to match the already written roles of Joy, I. Q., Harmony and Courage and they had to be not in the usual mold, would have to function as a musical quartet and last, but not least, be believable. Believable because they would become communicators of the series' basic Utopian ideal that people living and playing together can be happy together despite all problems.

The Krofft's decided upon London as the staging area for a vast talent search. The whole thing became headline front page news for many weeks in England.

The young hopefuls envisioning, fame and fortune in Hollywood, came from all over. More than 5,000 were interviewed.

Following auditions the list was narrowed down to just 15.

"We hid them in a small school where nobody could find them because we didn't want anyone else tampering with them. Then we flew back to this country, booked at the 13 screen tests and made our final decision," Marty Krofft said.

The Lucky Four

The lucky four were John Philpott, who at the time was working as a pants presser in a factory for $12 a week, Wayne Laryea, a cockney lad, who said he "mucks about a bit on the piano." John McIndoe, a circus performer and self-taught guitar player. And Caroline Ellis, the only girl in the group, a bit player and musician.

For these lucky youngsters the whole thing must be a Cinderella story far more fantastic that the Bugaloos TV show.

When the kids, none of whom had known each other before, arrived in this country the Krofft's protectively ensconced them in a 52-room mansion, complete with maid and butler.

Each is paid $1,000 a week for the TV series, they have a Capitol label recording contract signed late last week and will star in the motion picture version of the television show.

Just two months ago each was going his or her small, anonymous way.

I found the youngsters extremely polite and likeable in person, just as they will be on your screen.

The Tranquility Isle set on Paramount's Stage 19 is very lavish and colorful.

Although Marty Krofft was a bit coy concerning the production budget of the show, it is $1.5 million for the first 17 episodes, which makes it one of the two most expensive Saturday morning shows on the air. The other is Pufnstuf.

Patriotic Broadcasts 'In'

By RICK DU BROW

Several major programs with highly patriotic overtones have been announced by the television networks, ranging from coverage of "Honor America Day" ceremonies July 4 to a musical about George M. Cohan.

In recent years, the nation's July 4 Independence Day observance has been more or less glossed over by the national video companies.

But major coverage for the upcoming holiday festivities in Washington, D.C., is scheduled for the three commercial networks.

● NBC-TV will offer separate day and night specials this July 4 for "Honor America Day." In the morning, along with ABC-TV and CBS-TV, it will present a lengthy live report of religious and patriotic ceremonies at the Lincoln Memorial. Starting time is 8 a.m.

This special program, expected to last an hour or more, will include such participating personalities as evangelist Billy Graham and singer Kate Smith, who has been famous over the years for her rendition of "God Bless America."

According to ABC-TV, the daytime national memorial service is expected to include "an opening salute, rendition of the national anthem, prayer and scripture reading, soloists and choirs performing traditional American songs, patriotic readings and addresses, a benediction and a final 30-gun salute."

● Other participants in the service, the network adds, are expected to include "the United States Army Band, a massed church choir of 500 voices, the Centurymen Choir of Fort Worth, Tex., soloists, representatives of all religious faiths and special guests."

On the night of July 4, meanwhile, NBC-TV, in the 90-minute slot usually reserved for the "Tonight Show," will present an "entertainment" program taped earlier in the evening at the Washington Monument. Bob Hope will be master of ceremonies.

According to NBC-TV, "Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians will provide the music in the nighttime program. Activities will include performances by various entertainment personalities and a fireworks display."

● Bope and Graham are co-chairmen for the nationwide ceremonies of the day. Honorary chairmen for "Honor America Day" are Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, widow of the late ex-President; and former Presidents Harry S. Truman and Lyndon B. Johnson.

NBC-TV has also announced that an adaptation of the Broadway musical "George M!," starring Joel Grey in his acclaimed stage role as the composer - performer - playwright - producer George M. Cohan, will be broadcast Sept. 12, the same night as the Miss America Pageant on the same network.

Cohan, of course, was well known for such rousing patriotic tunes as "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and "You're a Grand Old Flag," as well as many other standards that include "Give My Regards to Broadway," "Mary," "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway" and "Harrigan."

Sullivan to Beam The AGVA Show

The Ed Sullivan Show will devote its entire Sept. 20 premiere show this fall on CBS-TV to AGVA's "Entertainer of the Year" Awards. Bob Precht, producer of the Ed Sullivan Show has reached an agreement with the American Guild of Variety Artists (AGVA) acquiring television rights to their first annual awards presentation show. It is planned to tape the show in the Las Vegas Convention Center on Labor Day weekend.

Top stars of the entertainment world, who belong to AGVA, the union governing "live" performances, will be on hand and perform on the telecast. AGVA's celebrity members include such headliners as Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr., Dean Martin, Barbra Streisand and every entertainer appearing before the public "live" in night clubs, concerts, theaters, fairs, etc.

The American Guild of Variety Artists (AGVA), headed by Danny Thomas, president and Jack Bakey, executive first vice president, will poll its 18,000 members to name the Entertainer of the Year, plus the "five" performers and performances of the year in nine other categories: Comedy Star of the Year (male), Comedy Star of the Year (female), Musical Star of the Year (male), Musical Star of the Year (female), Musical Group of the Year, Novelty Act of the Year, Animal Act of the Year, Outstanding Production Number of the Year, and Star of Tomorrow. There will also be a Golden Award to a distinguished star selected by a special committee.

Wrong Answer!

Searching for some clue as to which way female fashions will go next season on NBC-TV's "Bruchen's World," mini or midi, as interviewer asked producer Stan Rubin what he thought of the riskis. Purried Rubin, "Didn't they beat 'Army' last year?"
