As a Professional Organization, NAPN...

- Seeks to establish and protect ethical values of the nursing profession
- Defends nursing and para-medical personnel from discrimination and/or job loss for refusal to participate in practices which violate these values
- Demonstrates concern for those facing difficult choices involving life-taking decisions by education and promotion of positive alternative choices
- Seeks to develop life-affirming attitudes in the nursing profession by promotion of these ethical values to those we interact with in the workplace
- Involves the organization's members in the legislative process to promote life-affirming legislation
- Recognizes the value of and supports research beneficial to humanity when it is done with consideration for the dignity of the person involved and with their full and informed consent
- Rejects research involving people unable or unwilling to give their full, informed consent; and research which involves experimentation with dangerous procedures or drugs which impair or endanger the health and well-being of the person or their offspring
