

This architectural drawing shows a vertical section of a building facade. The central portion features a wall with vertical lines, punctuated by four sets of windows. Each window set consists of two dark, square panes with diagonal crosshairs, flanked by two smaller, white rectangular panels. Below the second window set from the top is a small, white rectangular panel. At the bottom of this central section is a white door with a small, dark handle. To the right of the door is a small, white rectangular panel. The right side of the drawing is a textured wall with a repeating pattern of small, dark squares. The overall style is minimalist and architectural.
