Coach Hogan

ESL Teacher

As a former athlete and soccer player, preaching the idea of "going outside to play" is as important to my approach to athletics as my educational methods. I started Hogan Athletics as part of my own professional development, knowing that activity after school and the associated benefits does have a lifelong value which contributes to physical literacy. I am excited to coach and look forward to having the privilege and the opportunity of working with your student/athletes of all different abilities, to help them reach their potential on and off the field.

Coach Nazzaro

School Psychologist

Kristen began her fitness journey in 2018 and hasn't looked back. Over the past 8 years, she has been building her knowledge bank through science-back research and recently began participating in local powerlifting competitions. Kristen has seen how impactful strength and fitness training have been on her mindset, confidence, and success. She believes that children can harness these benefits while learning about strength in a developmentally appropriate way. Through child-friendly workouts and education on strength and fitness, her goal is to show kiddos what it means to feel strong and utilize that to help them feel confident and successful in the real world.
