Attracting an animal: Wildlife Watchdog has a variety of species-specific lures to help attract the specific animal you are targeting for capture and avoid non-target captures. You need to determine the right kind of attractant that will hold up and draw in the animal to be trapped.

Trap placement: It's important to establish the right area to place your trap. If there is a burrow or spot where the animal is living, place trap close to where they travel to and from that location.

Handling captured animal: Use extreme caution when dealing with wildlife as they can be unpredictable and cause serious injury. Most States have specific regulations as to what can be done with captured wildlife. You can find information about this on most State Department of Environmental Resources websites. Prior to trapping, make sure you understand what is legal in your area and have a plan for what you will do with a capture before you set your trap!!
