2.3 Why Work with me

Aside from my professional qualifications, I possess lived experiences that I feel allow me to better comprehend and assist my clients. Firstly, I struggled with OCD for over twenty years before receiving a diagnosis, so I understand firsthand how challenging it can be. Secondly, I've dealt with high levels of stress throughout my life, which eventually resulted in mental and physical burnout. My condition was likely exacerbated by my undiagnosed OCD, as well as my experiences working in the fast-paced Financial Services industry in both London and Sydney, studying part-time while working, and later becoming a studying mother. I eventually hit rock bottom, performing compulsions for hours on end while caring for my two young children, whom I adore.

After receiving a diagnosis of OCD, I underwent a rigorous year of treatment, which wasn't easy at times. I am pleased to share that I am now able to manage my OCD symptoms and have considered myself “successfully managed” now for over 12 months.

I believe it is my responsibility to:

- share educational information and content and conduct appointments in a safe and ethical manner;
- prioritise informed consent;
- deliver what I have promised with integrity;
- hold space for you to explore your needs; provide you with support and accountability;
- practice within the scope of my qualifications;
- undertake ongoing professional development; and
- make all reasonable efforts to meet a high standard of best practice.

4.0 What I Expect from You as a Client

Important information about how to care for your own wellbeing is set out below. If you have any questions or concerns, please email me before proceeding with your purchase or booking.

4.1 Important to understand

I am a qualified Australian Naturopath, and it's important to clarify that while I am deeply committed to supporting your health and wellbeing through naturopathic care, I am not a medical doctor, therapist, or counsellor. My work does not treat or diagnose any disease or illness. My expertise lies in naturopathy, which encompasses holistic approaches to health and wellness. I am not a substitute for medical advice, mental health support, therapy, or counselling. If any concerns arise during our work together, I strongly recommend you seek advice from a qualified professional or support service.

At all times, you remain fully responsible for your own physical, emotional, and mental wellbeing. While I strive to provide comprehensive care, there might be instances where my evaluation could potentially miss certain aspects. You are encouraged to make informed decisions regarding your own health. If at any point I believe that your situation requires the attention of a medical professional, I will openly communicate and recommend seeking appropriate medical care.

Naturopathic care is complementary to conventional medical treatments, and I encourage you to continue consulting with your medical doctor for primary care needs. It is essential to maintain open communication between all healthcare providers involved in your wellbeing. If you are working with a different health practitioner at the same time, make sure you inform me and them, and continue any existing treatment plans. I am always happy to work collaboratively as part of your holistic healthcare team.

If you are taking any medication or treatments, this is NOT the time to stop.

4.2 Understanding the Naturopathic Healing System and how to get the best from working with me.

Naturopathic care is centred around holistic healing, focusing on the root causes of health concerns rather than merely addressing symptoms. It involves a comprehensive evaluation of your health, lifestyle, and unique circumstances. Just as it takes time for health issues to manifest, the journey towards improving health and, ultimately, optimal wellbeing is a gradual process.

Much like tending to a garden, the care you invest in your health directly influences the outcomes. Adhering to the recommended dietary changes, incorporating recommended supplements, and following lifestyle suggestions are vital components of the naturopathic journey. What you put into this process is integral to the results you'll experience.

Your active participation, honest feedback, and open communication about your experiences are invaluable. If you have any concerns or questions, or if you're not experiencing the expected improvements, please reach out. Your journey is unique, and adjustments to your plan may be necessary to better suit your individual needs.

In our One-to-One appointments, you are urged to disclose your complete medical history, including current medications and supplements, to ensure a comprehensive understanding of potential interactions and implications for your individual health and to update me of any changes, such as trying to conceive (males and females), becoming pregnant, being diagnosed with any new health concerns or conditions, or starting any new medication or supplements.

Please remember this information is just as important in the initial consultation as it is in all subsequent appointments. The more information you can provide about your overall health and wellness, the better I can understand your unique self and how your body reacts to different modalities and changes. If anything changes for you between our appointments together, it is important that you share this information with me, i.e., body functions, signs, symptoms, mindset, etc. Also as important - if something changes between appointments in terms of your health status i.e. you find out through another health practitioner that you now have high blood pressure, high cholesterol, or any new diagnoses, you decide you want to try to start conceiving (male or female), may be pregnant and/or start taking new medications – I need to know this information to personalise recommendations safely and according to your individual needs.

If you choose not to continue working with me for any reason, there will be no hard feelings; you can come back anytime in the future should you wish. However, it is essential that you understand treatment evolves as your health evolves, so if I recommend something in your first treatment plan, it may not be useful (sometimes it can even be harmful) to keep doing in the long term – please seek clearance from another qualified health professional before deciding to continue with recommendations made by me without my guidance.

Finally, remember to celebrate the small victories along the way. Positive changes, even if subtle, are indications that the healing process is unfolding. I am committed to supporting you every step of the way and adjusting your plan as needed.

4.3 Are we the right match to work together?

You will get the most out of working with me if you approach our collaboration with an open mind, a commitment to making positive lifestyle changes, and a willingness to actively engage in personalised strategies and recommendations tailored to your unique health journey. Embracing this partnership with dedication, honesty, and proactive communication will empower you to achieve optimal well-being and unlock the full potential of your health transformation.

You might not be a good fit for this work if you seek quick fixes without a willingness to invest time and effort in holistic lifestyle changes. Additionally, if you are not open to collaborative communication, exploring alternative health approaches, or actively participating in the naturopathic process, this may not be the most suitable fit for your wellness journey.

It's essential to recognise that achieving meaningful and sustainable health outcomes often requires a commitment to gradual progress and a cooperative effort between client and practitioner.
