A Night Owl Celebrates New Year's Eve

By: Christopher Lane

There's a good chance you'll get this issue before New Year's Eve and rather than discuss all the psychological meanings and aspirations behind its annual observance, let's instead talk about what you'll be doing that special evening. For example, I know many of you will relax at home, watching the ball drop at midnight. Others will attend a fun party with friends and/or family and perhaps sing "Auld Lang Syne" as you bid farewell to 2019 and anticipate 2020. I proudly join the rest of you who insist on going out to celebrate...perhaps with dinner and drinks, a great concert, a packaged gala affair, or simply being out among the crowds and sharing a toast together somewhere at midnight.

My closest friends know me as an "night owl" and I have long lived up to that moniker, especially on weekends and certainly for most New Year's Eve celebrations. As I approach 67 years of age, I still enjoy a late night out and a festive atmosphere. If it's a party, I'm ready! The secret is power naps. Give me 45 minutes in the late afternoon or very early evening with my feet elevated and I'm ready to witness 2:00 a.m. or later!

Admittedly, my penchant for staying up late can make my wife Linda a bit exasperated. I swear it sometimes seems like her favorite time of the day is when it's time to retire for the night. This is especially true on Sundays through Thursdays when 11:00 rolls around and she gleefully announces "It's time for sleep!" I usually howl "Nooooooo!!! NO sleep!!" She simply ignores me and gets into bed. I dutifully follow, but with the understanding that with the lights off, I can read as late as I want with my Kindle. Fridays and Saturdays are a little better. I can usually talk her into staying up until at least midnight, reminding her that we used to stay up way past that when we were dating 25 years ago. She just looks at me.

Admittedly, I haven't always gotten my way on New Year's Eve. There have been a few of what some of you like to fondly describe as "quiet evenings at home" interspersed over the last decade or so, despite my stubborn insistence that we go out. On those past occasions, Linda has neatly side-stepped my ideas, resorting to sneaky tactics like putting on some great music and opening a nice bottle of wine, while preparing a truly delicious meal. All I can do is just stand there, mouth agape as she completely alters my plans. Afterward, she has had the audacity to challenge me to one of our favorite games, knowing full well that I can't resist. Before I know it, the evening has snuck by us, the clock has struck midnight and she's tugging me to bed by 12:30 after having drugged me with the food, the wine and the mental exercise of competition.

Well this year, it's going to be different! Having recently moved from the suburbs to downtown, we are now within easy walking distance of where the action is and I intend for us to take full advantage of that. Music will be playing everywhere and the dancing will be rampant...even if by mostly the "20-something" crowd. No problem...there are restaurants to reserve, theatrical productions to observe, and great memories to preserve. I will take the hand of my lovely wife and we shall stroll along Main Street, taking in the sights and sounds of this beautiful downtown in which we now live. 'Cause this year, we're going out, by golly!

As we begin a new decade...and no matter how you choose to spend the special evening that kicks it off...I'm sure I speak for all of us at the Community Connector in wishing you all an enjoyable celebration... and a truly happy, healthy and peaceful 2020.

No Job is Too Big, Too Small or Too Odd

Resolution Free

By Linda Martin

Do you make resolutions every New Year or feel the pressure to do so? Do you tire of others asking what are your New Year's resolutions? Do you feel disappointed when following through doesn't happen or do you just abandon the idea altogether as futile? Most of us want to make improvements in our lives. Yet the new year can falsely become "THE" time to pledge our dedication to goals that don't truly come from inner clarity. Rather our "aspirations" may come from "shoulds", negative self-judgment, obligations, or the expectations of others. Researchers have found that only about 8% of people actually accomplish their resolutions. Talk about a recipe for guilt and shame!

The fact is that new goals can start on any day at any time when it comes from our true heart-felt desires for reaching more of our unique potential. I'm going to suggest that this year, we make NO New Year's resolutions! Read on for how this might bring you more satisfaction, growth, and positive changes in your life.

Change more easily comes from a place of acceptance of and compassion for ourselves. So take the pressure off, take a breath and relax. Here are a few suggestions for entering the New Year with a different mindset and for change to happen naturally:

- Be aware of and eliminate "shoulds". These "ought to" messages don't usually imply something we're excited about, often come from a self-critical dialogue and from efforts to conform to expectations of others.
- Be fully present. Without the conflict in our minds about the past or future, we are more aware in the present of our true inner desires.
- Be positive...and open about yourself, your potential, and the possibilities that are available to you.
- Be compassionate toward yourself... especially when you feel you've fallen short.
- Use things like meditation, nature walks, music, and quiet time for reflection.

I will credit other wisdom from our three-year-old great niece Fiona. On a recent visit, I had some uninterrupted time with her and was fascinated by what I observed and learned. She uses her imagination and loves to create even when no one really understands what she's doing. She's passionate about playing and confidently engages others in her play. She doesn't pretend to "go along" in situations she doesn't enjoy, such as people pretending to be close to her or wanting hugs when she doesn't really know them. She sometimes expresses emotions loudly, especially to her parents who validate these feelings while teaching her appropriate ways to handle them. She laughs a lot. She lives fully in the present and finds questions like, "what happened at pre-school today" or requests to repeat a song she made up yesterday to be totally irrelevant to the here and now!

Would that we all could reclaim those lessons from our childhood of being free to create and play and laugh and acknowledge and express our feelings and become the unique person we're each meant to be...the best version of ourselves.

So, here's to a new year of days of letting your inner voice and intuition guide you to those changes you truly yearn for. In the words internationally known spiritual teacher Ma Jaya, "Quiet the mind and the soul will speak."
