To Whom It May Concern:

I have been asked to evaluate the candidacy of Renee De La Torre for registered dental assistant (RDA). I don't write many letters of recommendation, but I am happy to write this one.

Renee worked with me at The Dental Implant Center from September 2023 through February 2024. She joined my practice after an impressive career assisting some of the most respected dentists in the profession. It did not take long for me to recognize the level of experience, professionalism, and clinical ability she brought to the table. I offered her a position after her working interview because I knew she would be an asset to my practice.

Although Renee came to me with years of experience, she embraced the opportunity to further refine her skills in implant surgery, restorative implant dentistry, and laboratory procedures. She was coachable, eager to learn, and genuinely wanted to become better. That combination of experience and humility is uncommon and allowed me to build upon an already solid foundation.

Mine is not a practice where people simply show up and get by. We started surgery at 6:30 every morning, and Renee was there by 6:00, prepared for the day before the first patient ever walked through the door. She eagerly embraced our commitment to excellence. She was dependable, organized, and took pride in being prepared for each patient encounter.

I do not recommend people simply because they have worked for me. I recommend them when I believe they have earned it. Renee has earned it.

If Renee is part of your team, my advice is simple: invest in her, continue challenging her to grow, and do what you can to keep her. Exceptional assistants are difficult to find, and Renee is one of them.

I recommend Renee without reservation. I cannot imagine a scenario where her employment would lead to even the slightest disappointment. I am convinced that she will be, and continue to be, an asset to your practice and to your patients.

Sincerely,

David McFadden, D.M.D., F.A.C.P., F.A.A.I.D.
