Oregon Ravens Open OTA's as Search for 2027 Roster Talent Continues

PORTLAND, OR – Just because WNFC National Tryout Day is behind us doesn't mean your chance to take flight has passed.

The Oregon Ravens are officially gearing up for the 2027 Women's National Football Conference (WNFC) season, and there is still time to earn your spot on the roster. The franchise has officially announced open registration for its upcoming series of Organized Team Activities (OTAs) for athletes ready to prove they belong in the flock.

What is an OTA? (For First-Time Playmakers)

If you are coming from basketball, track, soccer, rugby, or stepping onto the gridiron for the very first time, the term OTA stands for Organized Team Activity.

In everyday terms, an OTA is a structured offseason practice and evaluation session held long before the formal playing season begins.

The Purpose: Coaches use OTAs to teach team strategy, run position-specific drills, and assess physical potential, while players get hands-on experience with the squad's playbook philosophy.

The Environment: OTAs focus on footwork, athletic movement, and scheme learning in a non-contact setting (shorts and cleats rather than full protective gear), making it an approachable entry point for crossover talent.

The Atmosphere: It functions like a theatrical choreography rehearsal or pre-season workshop—allowing veteran leadership and prospective talent to build chemistry on the field together.

Led coaching staff, these two-hour intensive field workouts focus on:

Agility & Footwork: Speed ladders, cone drills, and high-intensity footwork mechanics designed to elevate quickness, lateral movement, and reaction times.

Position-Specific Skills: Targeted coaching covering route running, ball-handling, tackling fundamentals, coverage techniques, and trench play execution.

Conditioning & Movement: Football-specific endurance training built to establish elite, game-ready stamina for tryout evaluations.

Important Participation Notice: These sessions are strictly reserved for individuals actively interested in trying out and earning a position as a 2027 roster player.

Register for OTAs today by completing your official Player Application at Oregonravens.com.
