Ethics vs Morals, You Decide - Ron Byrd

1 HR Course #71322

In this course, we will explore the important distinction between ethics and morals, two concepts that are often used interchangeably but carry different meanings. While morals are personal principles shaped by upbringing, culture, and individual beliefs about right and wrong, ethics are the structured rules and standards that guide behavior within a professional or societal context. Understanding the difference is essential, especially in fields where decisions impact others, because it helps us recognize when we are guided by personal values versus when we are held accountable to established ethical codes.

Don't Press Your Luck - Nedra Clingan

1HR - Course 142213

Get ready for a fun and interactive learning experience with Nedra Clingan as she leads a dynamic CE class on Self-Funding — presented with a twist! Inspired by the classic game show Press Your Luck, attendees will be divided into three teams to compete for points and “fake dollars” while diving into the fundamentals and strategies of self-funded health plans. This engaging session combines education with excitement, keeping everyone on their toes as they test their knowledge, learn key concepts, and “press their luck” for the top score. It’s the perfect way to earn CE credit while having a blast with your peers!

The Undewrlying Cost of Accessing Healthcare - Joe Brining

1 HR - Course 143836

Healthcare is often discussed in terms of premiums, deductibles, and out-of-pocket expenses—but the true cost goes far beyond what's listed on a policy. This course explores the hidden costs of healthcare and why it's critical for agents to shift their focus from simply selling plans to delivering comprehensive financial protection.

As agents, we must look deeper at the real-life impact healthcare events have on our clients. What happens when a client faces frequent doctor visits, relies on telemedicine, or needs ongoing treatment?
