

Preserving a Nation's Legacy: Celebrating Constitution Day

Cobeal's Contribution to Mexico's Constitution and Cultural Heritage

On February 2, Mexico honors Constitution Day, a tribute to the 1917 Constitution that shaped the nation's legal and social framework. This historic document, preserved in the Archivo General de la Nación (AGN), stands as a testament to Mexico's enduring commitment to democracy, justice, and the rule of law. But how does a nation ensure that such a priceless piece of history—along with thousands of other critical archives—remains intact for future generations?

That's where Cobeal comes in.

The Project: A Climate-Controlled Future for Mexico's Archives

Entrusted with the full-scale construction of a state-of-the-art preservation facility, Cobeal played a pivotal role in safeguarding the nation's most valuable historical documents. The three-story, 5,250 m² facility was meticulously engineered to create an optimal storage environment for archives and photography collections, protecting them from deterioration caused by temperature fluctuations, humidity, and external pollutants.

The Challenge: Engineering the Perfect Preservation Climate

Historical documents require precise environmental conditions to prevent fading, paper degradation, and ink deterioration. Cobeal's task was to design and construct a building that could maintain a consistent 19°C (66.2°F) temperature with 35% relative humidity (RH) year-round—a challenge that required advanced engineering, specialized HVAC systems, and airtight construction.

Our team worked with precision and innovation, integrating:

- ✓ Advanced climate control technology to regulate temperature and humidity with exacting accuracy.
- ✓ High-efficiency insulation and air circulation systems to prevent environmental fluctuations.
- ✓ Structural reinforcements designed to protect against seismic activity, ensuring the archives remain secure in any condition.

WHY IT MATTERS

Protecting Mexico's Cultural and Legal Identity

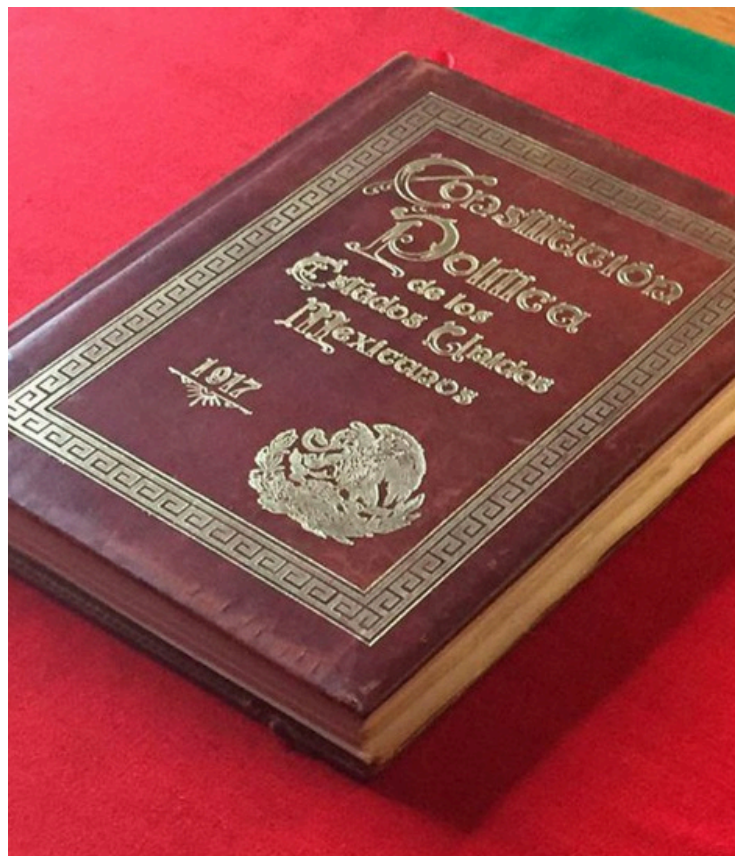

The Archivo General de la Nación is more than an archive—it is the collective memory of Mexico, housing centuries of treaties, legislation, manuscripts, and photographs that tell the story of the nation. Without proper preservation, these irreplaceable records risk being lost to time.

Through this project, Cobeal has not only contributed to infrastructure excellence but has also played a direct role in protecting Mexico's heritage. This is more than construction—it is nation-building, ensuring that scholars, legal experts, and future generations can continue to study, learn from, and honor the documents that define Mexico's identity.

Looking Forward: Cobeal's Commitment to Preservation

As Mexico celebrates Constitution Day, we take pride in knowing that Cobeal has left a lasting mark on history—not just in the buildings we construct but in the legacies we help protect. From cultural archives to cutting-edge sports facilities, our work is driven by precision, innovation, and a deep respect for the communities we serve.

At Cobeal, we don't just build structures—we build the future while preserving the past.
