

2005 BUBBA League Season

The 2005 season was noted for historic first's.

Before the draft, more trades were made to exchange draft picks than ever before.

The VA Gents brought a lap top to conduct his draft.

Danny did not drink a beer.

And with their end of draft trade, Black Jack and Showtime doomed themselves for the season. Well actually, Eddie doomed himself with the Julius Jones trade with the Devil, and brought Brady with him.

As the season wore on, three things became clear.

The Gents screwed up royally with the Tatum Bell trade with The Devil.

The Who Dats were really lucky.

And Hairy Polis and RoadKill Gang, with their trades with their little buddies, were the teams to beat.

In the end, Mr. Lucky wasn't so, the Gents salvaged a playoff spot, and nothing more, Da Mudbugz quietly minded his business and nearly was in the Bowl again and the DiamondBacks... oh the DBacks. A fine season, but no shirt.

The Rats, even though finishing out of the playoffs and into the Toilet Bowl, cannot be lumped in the three that set the BUBBA League on it's ear.

Black Jack, Showtime and Malum In Se combined for four wins. Another note, Black Jack had 11 consecutive losses. And fittingly, Mal and Showtime played one game to a tie.

In the end, the Hairy and RoadKill via for the 2005 Super Bowl championship, and the coveted T-shirt.

RoadKill put a whipping on HP and claimed his second championship, joining original members Who Dats and VA Gents and a two time winner.

The recap of the 2005 season:

BUBBA League 2005 Week #13

The mostly crazy BUBBA League regular season is over. It seems like yesterday that wild, ass trades were flying around the Trinity war room.

The VA Gents backed into the final BUBBA League Super Bowl playoff spot, by whipping up on Showtime, while the Rats watched LT and their season go to the locker room, just before halftime.

The Who Dats got some revenge from an opening day loss to the RoadKill Gang. With Shaun Alexander crying for more playing time last night, so was Danny.

Hairy Polis "quietly" finished with a nine game winning streak.

He and the RoadKill Gang will watch this week with a bye.

Because of their combined 4-33-2 records, Black Jack, Showtime, and Malum In Se all will be sharing in the beer and food purchase at next years draft!!

Remember to put in a tiebreaker. If you don't select one, one will be selected alphabetically.

BUBBA League Scores for 2005 Playoff Week 1

As it has all year, the Monday night game turned out to be a big factor in the results of the first week of BUBBA League Playoffs.

The DiamondBacks used the Atlanta QB efforts to Dunn get past Da Mudbugz and advance to the second round. The VA Gents advanced as well to face the Division leaders, Hairy Polis and RoadKill Gang.

The normally Mr. Lucky, the Who Dats, couldn't find any as Carson Palmer and Willis McGhee decided to have their worst games of the season.

The Toilet Bowl saw the most exciting results this week.

As expected, the Grove Rats rolled to eliminate himself from beer bringing contention.

Prior to the Monday night game, Showtime held a slight lead to join the Rats. But as we have seen all year, Malum In Se, Black Jack and Showtime have demonstrated a special "bond". All three teams ended their scoring separated by a difference of one point. By scoring 62 points, Mal is eliminated.

With Showtimes 61 and Black Jacks 60, they will face off next week to the Toilet Bowl finals. Black Jack goes for a possible back to back beer bringing experience.

Reminder: Three games on Saturday. Plan accordingly.

PlayOff Week 1 Scores
Super Bowl
Da Mudbugz	81	DiamondBacks	88
Who Dats	60	Virginia Gentlemen	91
Toilet Bowl
Grove Rats	82	Showtime	61
Malum In Se	62	Black Jack	60

BUBBA League Scores for 2005 PlayOff Week 2

For quite a few years, the Who Dats and VA Gents have felt somewhat like the 72' Dolphins. The only two teams to capture the coveted BUBBA League Super Bowl shirt, twice.

That will end this year as the division leaders advanced to the 2005 championship.

The RoadKill Gang and Hairy Polis both soared way above the century mark to easily secure their berths.

The VA Gents, trying to be like the Grove Rats of yesteryear, couldn't keep up with the big boys.

DBacks, everyone's sentimental favorite to get into the big game, got little help from his players.

In the battle to bring the beer, Black Jack pulled a back to back, and will again be procuring the suds.

Based on their records, though, Mal and Showtime, need to help out.

The results of Playoff week two:

PlayOff Week 2 Scores
Super Bowl
RoadKill Gang	125	Hairy Polis	138
DiamondBacks	66	Virginia Gentlemen	93
Toilet Bowl
Showtime	50	Black Jack	36

And then there were three.

The RoadKill Gang joined the Who Dats and the Virginia Gentlemen as a two time winner of the coveted BUBBA League Super Bowl T-shirt.

Buoyed by his running backs, the Gang avenged an early season loss to Hairy Polis to capture the 2005 crown.

The Final:

RoadKill Gang - 153
Hairy Polis - 111

Also, there is a cash prize.

RoadKill Gang: $572.00
Hairy Polis: $244.00
Admin 65.00

The Draft Status for the 2006 Season:

Black Jack - aka back to back Jack - An eleven game losing streak.

Malum In Se - can't resist - What a difference a year makes

Showtime - Speaking of can't resisting, a trade...P.S. ->Give me a call, Eddie. Your buddy, The Gents

Grove Rats - Next year, more beer....

VA Gents - That Tatum Bell thing would have worked out if Craft hadn't drafted Anderson. Ya right.

DiamondBacks - He's got skills. Numchuck.

Who Dats - Scored the least amount of points for a playoff team. Can definitely pick a winner. Maybe next year it will be his team.

Da Mudbugz - How does he keep finishing near the top each year??

Hairy Polis - The Edge for Duce?? Scoreboard

RoadKill Gang - 2005 SuperBowl Champ... with assists from Showtime and VA Gents.

Till next year..
