

Anthony DiLorenzo

Anthony DiLorenzo is a multiple Emmy Award-winning journalist with more than 20 years of experience in television news, covering high-profile breaking news, crime, and public safety stories in major U.S. markets. He spent the last 11 years at WPIX-TV in New York as a lead evening and primetime correspondent, reporting on some of the most significant and complex stories across the city.

Prior to WPIX, Anthony was an enterprise reporter at WFTV in Orlando, and held reporting roles at WFXT in Boston and WTIC in Hartford. He began his on-air career as a weekend evening anchor at WWLP in Springfield, Massachusetts.

Throughout his career, Anthony has earned multiple Emmy Awards, six additional Emmy nominations, and two Associated Press awards for breaking news coverage. Known for his fact-driven reporting, he built deep, trusted relationships with law enforcement officials, prosecutors, and city government leaders—providing unique access and insight into how major stories develop and unfold.

His experience across top newsrooms has given him a comprehensive understanding of how stories are sourced, verified, and brought to air—along with what drives coverage and credibility in today's media landscape.

Anthony holds a Bachelor of Science in Journalism from Suffolk University. He lives in New York City with his wife, Kala Rama, and their two sons.
