ZION CHRISTIAN IN GROWTH MODE

JASON ZASKY

For more than 45 years, Zion Christian Academy—on Old Zion Road, 15 minutes west of downtown Columbia—has been providing students with the kind of college-preparatory education and biblical worldview training that prepares them for success in life.

“We are a pre-school through 12th-grade Christian school that has been in existence since 1979,” begins Rick Jarvis, who has been Head of School since 2019. “The ‘why’ behind our existence is three-pronged: We’re Christ-centered, we’re focused on excellent and rigorous academics, and we’re focused on calling. That is, helping students discern how God has equipped them with particular talents, abilities, and skills, and trying to help them unpack how they are going to use that for God’s Kingdom as they transition into adulthood.”

The school—which originally started as a ministry of Zion Presbyterian Church and shares the same campus—has been in growth mode. In fact, it recently launched a new capital campaign dubbed Impact Eternity to help implement a new master site plan that includes the addition of six new classrooms, as well as new cafeteria spaces.

Zion Christian Academy (ZCA) is also in the process of formally becoming an independent Christian school, a move designed to allow the school and the Zion Presbyterian Church to better fulfill their respective missions.

“Once the school becomes independent sometime in early 2026, it will be a non-denominational Christian school designed to serve a variety of denominations and Christian families in the Maury County area,” elaborates Jarvis. “We certainly want to maintain our fidelity to our mission of being a distinctly Christian, Bible-centered, and Biblical worldview-focused school.”

As for the student body, Jarvis says that ZCA currently has 528 students enrolled, the largest number in the history of the school. Students typically begin their ZCA careers at one of five entry points: Pre-K, Kindergarten, fifth grade, sixth grade, or ninth grade. And the school maintains limits in terms of student-teacher ratio, as well as how many students are in each individual classroom.

“It varies by grade level, but in grades one through five, 18 is the largest number of kids we will put in a room. And it's between 22 and 24 in middle school and high school," explains Jarvis, who says parents of a prospective student typically start by requesting an information packet and taking a tour, and then having their child "shadow" a ZCA student for a day or part of a day.

"Then, if a family is interested, they can complete an application, which involves reference forms from former teachers, as well as a pastoral or church reference. The application process also includes an interview, typically with one of the principals," elaborates Jarvis, who says watching students develop academically and spiritually is the most rewarding part of his job.

"We're preparing kids academically; it's rigorous, and they are challenged, but we are also looking forward to how they are going to operate when they are adults with their own families. We get to see little glimpses of that. We are always looking for the sparks where we see some spiritual development and spiritual maturity, where we can see fruit, as it were, as it relates to being a follower of Jesus," continues Jarvis, who says that academics and the Christ-centered environment are just part of the school's appeal.

"There is very much a family or community feel to our staff and parent community, and there is a lot of appeal in that. It's easy to be loved and to be known when you are a part of the Zion Christian Academy community. That tends to be what draws people to us," adds Jarvis, before noting that it's not unlike the small-town feel of Columbia.

"I've said repeatedly that I wish my wife and I had moved to a small town like Columbia years ago," relates Jarvis, who previously worked at a Christian school in the Kansas City area, following the completion of his doctoral work at the University of Kansas. "The way life moves here, and the way people interact with each other, make this a great, great area."

But he is even more enthused about what the school expects to offer its students in the coming years.

"The Impact Eternity capital campaign and what we are trying to do to expand over the next 10 or 15 years is the most exciting new thing that is happening here," he concludes, before reminding us that the school will celebrate its 50th anniversary in 2029. "Part of what we are going through now is setting up the school for the next 50 years, and I couldn't be more excited."

EUROPEAN CAR SPECIALISTS

JASON ZASKY

"We were located in Nashville for five years until we lost our lease," begins John Monk, co-owner of Cooper's Garage, explaining what led him to open a new shop—at I-65 and Peytonsville Road. Fittingly, Franklin is where he wanted to be all along.

"Back in 2016, when I decided to open my own garage, I was combing the streets of Franklin trying to find a suitable building," he says. But Monk couldn't find a suitable location, until he discovered that one of his customers—from a company called Doors Unlimited—owned a building at what he now regards as his "dream location."

"They had been in business for 20 years or so and decided they were going to retire and sell the building. It's my dream location because you can see us from the Interstate, yet we are off the beaten path," explains Monk, who converted the space into a garage that looks much like what you'd find at, say, a BMW dealership.

"The floors in the shop are all seal-coated in a superlight white-grey (color) that reflects light. We also have eight state-of-the-art Rotary lifts—the same ones they have at Porsche dealerships. We have spared no expense on equipment; even our HVAC system goes 'above and beyond,'" says Monk, who prides himself on the immaculateness of his shop.

"It looks like you could eat off the floor (of our garage)," he notes, a level of cleanliness that does not go unnoticed by customers.

"I have had so many customers tell me, 'When I walk in and see you have a shop this nice, I know that you are going to take really good care of my car,'" he adds, noting that Cooper's Garage now services Audi's, BMW's, Mercedes-Benz, Porsche's, Volkswagen's and MINI Cooper's, the latter of which were the only brand they worked on at the Nashville location.

"When Cooper's Garage originally opened, it was just MINI Cooper's. That was our niche, and it was successful," says Monk.

"But here we have branched out," he adds, thanks to the addition of factory-certified technicians for all of the above-named brands. That includes his shop foreman, a 15-year master Audi technician, and Monk's son, who was trained while working at both Volkswagen and Audi dealerships.

Yet factory-trained, certified technicians aren't the only difference between Cooper's Garage and many of its competitors.

"There's also the personal touch," adds Monk. "My service provider (Doug) and I are gearheads, so we are knowledgeable about what the technicians are telling us and able to be the liaison between you and our techs. At the same time, we are personable and build relationships."

That helps explain why the garage attracts customers from as far away as Huntsville and Bowling Green. And why Monk expects that the forthcoming grand-opening celebration for Cooper's Garage (planned for this summer) might require more space than he has on his property.

"We are going to talk to the Ag Center to see if it would be okay to use their parking lot," offers Monk, who says he drives a BMW 530 to work and also owns a handful of MINI Cooper's, including a "practically mint condition" 2005 model that he takes to events, like this year's edition of "MINIs on the Dragon," to be held this spring in North Carolina.

Meanwhile, Monk says he's focused on the day-to-day operations of Cooper's Garage, which takes its name from the late boxer featured in the business' logo.

"We named him Cooper after the MINI Cooper, so the dog was named after the brand, and the shop was named after the dog," he explains, though it's Jellybean, a French bulldog, that is now ever-present at the shop.

One thing that has not changed, however, is the guiding principles that have contributed to the success of the business.

"My philosophy is: Do what you know and do it well," concludes Monk. "And at Cooper's Garage, you're not just a number, you're a person, and you're most likely getting an appointment the same week you call."

COMMUNITY SNAPSHOTS

CITY OF COLUMBIA LAUNCHES ADVANCED COMMUNITY SAFETY PLATFORM

Columbia Fire & Rescue announces the implementation of Community Connect, an innovative resident engagement platform designed to improve emergency response outcomes through voluntary information sharing. This initiative represents a significant advancement in community-centered emergency preparedness. Community Connect enables residents to securely share household information that assists first responders during emergency situations. The voluntary platform allows families to provide details about special needs residents, pets, property access, and emergency contacts—information that can be crucial during time-sensitive emergency responses.

“Emergency response effectiveness often depends on information we don’t have when we’re dispatched,” said Chris Cummins, Columbia Fire Chief. “Community Connect bridges that information gap by allowing residents to share what they believe would help us serve them better during emergencies.”

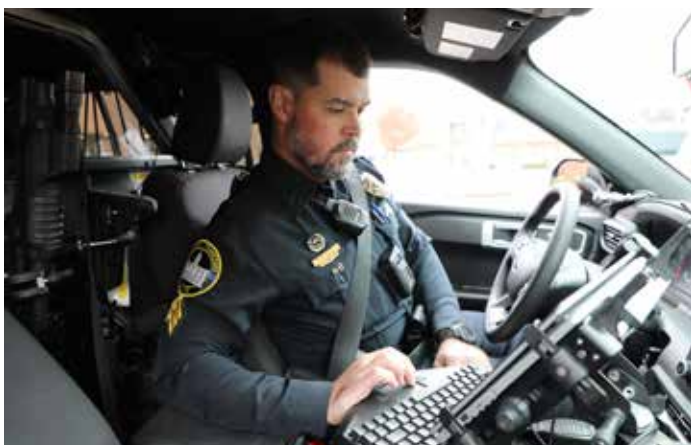

The platform employs advanced security protocols to protect resident data, with information accessible only to authorized emergency personnel during active responses. Participation is entirely voluntary, with residents maintaining control over what information they choose to share.

COLUMBIA STATE HOSTS FALL LEADERSHIP FOR OPERATIONAL EXCELLENCE PROGRAM

Columbia State Community College’s Office of Workforce and Continuing Education recently celebrated the completion of its fall 2025 cohort of the Leadership for Operational Excellence program with a reception recognizing the achievements and growth of the participants. The program equips new and emerging leaders with essential skills to excel and grow confidently in their roles.

CITY OF COLUMBIA AWARDED $1.3 MILLION VIOLENT CRIME INTERVENTION FUND GRANT

The City of Columbia is proud to announce that the Columbia Police Department has been awarded $1,300,000 through the State of Tennessee’s Violent Crime Intervention Fund (VCIF), administered by the Department of Finance & Administration’s Office of Criminal Justice Programs (OCJP).

“The VCIF program provides critical resources for communities across Tennessee to enhance public safety,” said Assistant Police Chief Jeremy Haywood. “This funding will allow us to expand investigative capabilities and equip our officers with advanced technology and modernized tools to respond more effectively to criminal offenses.”
