

A NOTE ABOUT CHANGES

Not to worry, we aren't going anywhere. We just want to mention that we have been doing some technical adjustments in recent weeks, and there have been a couple of unplanned outages. We apologize if these interruptions caused you to miss some of your favorite shows or that the music wasn't there when you needed it most, but rest assured our technical service group is working on preventing these issues to happen.

So why are we tinkering with our technical backbone that keeps the channel on the air? The end game is to provide an improved signal and to add some new features.

We want the music to sound as good as possible so that you can experience the songs the way their creators intended. The changes may be subtle, and many people may not notice the difference, but this will insure that songs are streamed at the same level so you won't be adjusting the volume on your end, and it will sound cleaner than before.

One test was our recent livestream from the Old Songs Festival. Using a new feature that we installed in June, our live broadcast from the festival was much improved - less interruptions to the stream (trying to get a reliable Internet connection in the middle of field has been challenging in the past!) and judging from the comments we received, it paid off!

Our app is also being improved to allow users to get a faster connection on Android Auto and Apple Car Play. By opening the player in our app, it will connect with Android and Apple equipped dashboards in your car to come up as a menu item, making it easier to take us along wherever you go!

IF you are having any problems, or if you suddenly tune in and cannot find us, let us know. Write to ron@folkmusicnotebook.com and tell us what you are experiencing.

Thank you all for your patience and understanding, and especially your support.

Without your contributions, this channel would not exist. We want to reward your support with the highest quality available, 24 hours a day! Thank you!!
