

MMEESS

Newsletter

September 5, 2021

---

A positive attitude toward training leads to actual behavior change

Psychological learning theory states that employees face shifts in their beliefs and attitudes that impact their performance. Positive attitudes toward training can lead to an increased likelihood of actual behavior change; conversely, negative attitudes toward training can lead to reduced motivation and a lack of effective learning. The purpose of this video is to explore psychological learning theory as applied in the field of human resources management. It should be noted that this is not intended as a general class guide but rather as a method for mental training.negative attitude about creativity in society.

---

Watch the video

A positive attitude toward training

An MME Production.

MMEESS is the symbol of freedom and creativity, we represent a whole new generation of people who think outside the box, we are here to change the negative attitude about creativity in society. Learners, or work-from-home employees, can connect to their managers at any time for one-on-one guidance or coaching. Each session is recorded and stored in a digital repository for reference further down the road.

Read more on our website

© MMEESS Brentwood, California 94513