Dovetail Cultural Resource Group is a small, woman-owned business headquartered in Fredericksburg, Virginia, with a second office in Wilmington, Delaware. Dovetail was founded in 2005 by its principals, Kerri Barile and Mike Carmody, who have decades of cultural resource management experience across the United States. The company has grown to over 40 staff, including cultural resource regulatory compliance specialists, archaeologists, architectural historians, historians, historic preservation planners, and GIS and CAD specialists. Dovetail has undertaken a wide variety of cultural resource projects across all client sectors, including federal, state, and local governments and private sector clients. In particular, Dovetail is known for our extensive transportation expertise in support of state departments of transportation throughout the mid-Atlantic region. Our depth of staff, multiple offices, and regulatory expertise allows us to provide a full range of cultural resource services in support of our client's project goals.
