

The Full Faith and Credit Challenge

Welcome, everyone, and thank you for joining us. I am Consul General Lamont Maurice El, Consul General of Morocco at North America, Maghrib al-Aqsa. Along with the host of The Foundation YouTube channel and the officers and members of Enforce The Constitution civic organization, I welcome you to this discussion of The Full Faith and Credit Challenge.

I convene this challenge on the strength of my firsthand experience and the documented experiences of others whom I have taught. Our website makes available video records, audio records, certified de facto court filings, and accompanying case summaries documenting the application of the jurisprudence principles and constitutional processes we teach.

I believe this body of evidence demonstrates my qualifications to present this challenge and provides a foundation for meaningful public examination. I invite participants to examine those records on our website (www.EnforceTheConstitution.org), ask specific questions, and evaluate the documented results. The same standard of facts, evidence, and experience that we ask others to meet applies to me and to this organization.

Our central question is this:

What is the primary solution to uplift fallen humanity today – and can you prove it with facts and experience?

This challenge is an ongoing forum. Its purpose continues beyond any single broadcast. We are establishing a respectful venue where people can present their proposed solutions, examine the processes others promote, ask direct questions, and substantiate what they teach.

The Enforce The Constitution civic organization follows the teachings and instructions of Prophet Noble Drew Ali, who warned us to repent from our sinful ways and go back to that state of mind of our forefathers Divine creed and National principles. He also said, "You who doubt whether I, the Prophet, and my principles are right for the redemption of my people, go to those that know law, in the City Hall and among the officials in your government and ask them under an intelligent tone, and they will be glad to render you a favorable reply, for they are glad to see me bring you out of darkness into light."

From that stated position, we invite those advocating other processes as the primary solution to come forward, explain their authority, and demonstrate their results. Our own interpretations, methods, and claimed results are also open to examination under the same standards.

Our purpose is peaceful and constructive. We seek to address confusion, slander, misrepresentation, and damage to the nationality and honor of Moorish-Americans through facts, documented evidence, firsthand experience, and fair opportunities to respond.

Who is invited - and How the challenge works

The challenge is open to all Moorish-Americans, Moors / Muurs, Indians, Native-Americans, Aboriginal / Indigenous People, Black / African-Americans, Hebrew Israelites, American State Citizens, Caucasians, and "White" People. We invite teachers, leaders, organizational representatives, and individuals to participate. Everyone who follows the rules is welcome, including those who disagree with us.

Participants will come forward one at a time, with an allotted period to present their position. We ask each participant to do six things.

First, present your solution. What do you maintain is the primary solution to uplift fallen humanity today, and why? Explain the process you recommend and what it is intended to accomplish.

Second, identify your authority. Present the constitutional provisions, treaty articles, laws, or other primary sources supporting your teaching. Identify the relevant passage and explain how it applies.

Third, show your evidence. Be prepared to share relevant documents and records. Give enough context for others to examine the claim. Identify any excerpts or edits.

Fourth, share your firsthand experience. Explain what you personally applied, what happened, and what documented results followed. Distinguish completed outcomes from pending matters and personal interpretations.

Fifth, answer questions. Be prepared to explain your position, evidence, process, and results. Participants must also have a reasonable opportunity to answer objections.

Sixth, explain the benefit to humanity. Show how your proposed solution advances freedom, justice, knowledge, unity, and responsible self-government, and explain what others would need to apply it.

Clarity and public accountability

We will measure proposed solutions and teachings against the supreme law of the land, including, but not limited to, the provisions of the Constitution for the United States of America under Article 3 (Judicial Clause), Article 4 section 1 (Full Faith and Credit Clause), Article 4 Section 4 (Republican Government Guarantee Clause), Article 6 clause 2 (Supremacy Clause), Amendments 9 and 10 (Retained Rights and Reserved Powers Clause), and the 'Clearfield Trust Doctrine' (Clearfield Trust Company vs. United States, 318 U. S. 363, 371 (1942)) before the court of public opinion. By that, we mean public examination of the evidence, so viewers can reach their own informed conclusions.

This challenge gives people an opportunity to be heard and substantiate what they teach. It also provides a forum to examine processes alleged to be unconstitutional (which literally means 'unlawful'), teachings said to create confusion and division, and ideas alleged to mislead people into conditions of slavery or servitude which would ultimately expose those amongst us whom are TRAITORS! Such allegations must themselves be supported with evidence.

If you teach it, promote it, or encourage others to practice it, come prepared to explain its authority and demonstrate its results.

Anyone challenging another person's teaching or process must identify the specific claim and present evidence supporting the objection. The person whose position is challenged should receive notice of the issue and a fair opportunity to respond. The same standards apply to everyone.

Where the evidence is incomplete, we will say so. Where a correction is supported, we will acknowledge it.

Challenges that remain unresolved may (not always) result in default, which will be interpreted as an admission by silence to the claims presented.

Rules for the live discussion

To maintain a safe and respectful forum, these rules apply to every participant.

One: Each participant receives an allotted time. One person speaks at a time, and the moderator manages questions and responses.

Two: Claims must be supported by identifiable sources and relevant evidence. Participants must distinguish documented outcomes from personal interpretations and pending matters.

Three: Questions and criticism must address the teachings, processes, and evidence. Personal insults, threats, harassment, and deliberate interruptions are not permitted. Disagreement alone is not grounds for removal.

Four: Present evidence accurately. Do not present an allegation as an established fact. Protect private information, and remember that statements and materials shared during the live may become part of a public recording.

Five: Allow a reasonable opportunity for questions and answers. The moderator may redirect, pause, or mute a speaker to restore order, and may remove someone for serious or repeated misconduct. These rules concern conduct, not agreement with the organizers.

Take part in the challenge

We invite the public to help shape this ongoing forum. Tell us which individuals or organizations you would like invited to present and defend their teachings, processes, or the offices they claim to hold. You may present your own solution, submit a challenge, or recommend a subject for examination.

A nomination is a request for examination, and may lead to a finding of wrongdoing. Identify a specific claim and the reasons it deserves examination. Use the submission process below so that questions can be organized and the person or organization concerned can receive a fair opportunity to respond.

To present your own solution or participate:

1. Identify yourself. Provide your name, any organization you represent, your role, and a reply email address. State whether you wish to present a solution, share firsthand experience, or respond to a challenge.

2. State your position. Identify the teaching or process you wish to present, explain its connection to the primary solution to uplift fallen humanity today, and summarize the results you claim.

3. Supply your supporting materials. Include the sources you rely on, relevant documents, case summaries, and links to recordings with precise timestamps. Explain what each item supports and what you personally applied or witnessed.

4. Confirm your readiness. State that you agree to the discussion rules and are willing to present evidence and answer relevant questions on a live public recorded broadcast. Include your availability. You may be subject to a pre-interview for security screening.

5. Email your submission. Send it to info@www.enforcetheconstitution.org with the subject line Full Faith and Credit Challenge - Participant Request - [Your Name].

We will review submissions for relevance, clarity, and readiness, request any needed information, and coordinate invitations and scheduling. A submission does not automatically reserve a speaking slot. Session details will be confirmed separately.

Request a challenge

To challenge or nominate an individual or organization:

1. Identify the subject. Give the name of the individual or organization and a public website, channel, or official contact, if known. Identify yourself and provide your reply email to us.

2. Identify the exact claim. Specify the teaching, process, or office claimed. Provide the statement or representation being questioned, where it appeared, and its date. Include a link, document page, or recording timestamp when available.

3. Explain your objection or question. State what you want examined and why. Identify the supporting evidence and relevant authority. Distinguish what you personally know from information reported by others and matters that remain unverified.

4. For a claimed office, identify the authority at issue. Specify the title, appointing or electing body (if any), claimed jurisdiction, and powers being asserted, insofar as known. State which credentials, appointment or election records, governing instruments, or other evidence you want the officeholder to explain or produce.

5. State your proposed role. Tell us whether you wish to present the challenge live, submit questions for the moderator, or recommend a subject without appearing. Include the specific questions you want answered and any relevant firsthand experience.

6. Email the request. Send it to info@www.enforcetheconstitution.org with the subject line Full Faith and Credit Challenge - Challenge Request - [Individual or Organization Name].

We will assess the request, seek clarification where needed, and invite a response to the specific issues before scheduling an examination. Nomination does not guarantee an appearance or publication.

Keep requests factual and respectful. Do not organize harassment or publish private contact information. Redact unnecessary personal information from supporting materials. The subject of a challenge will have a fair opportunity to answer, and unresolved questions may return in later sessions.

Let us approach this work with dignity, patience, and accountability. Let us examine the evidence, listen carefully, and remain willing to correct the record.

Come prepared to speak. Come prepared to show your evidence.
Come prepared to answer questions.

Thank you. Let us begin the discussion.
