

Rightmindedness

- Is this based upon unconditional love?
- Am I being motivated by attraction to love/care/virtue/heart/soul, moreso than alignment with might/power/popularity/convenience?
- Do I want fairness to be operative? Am I encouraging others to trust their own consciences over my secondhand opinions?
- Am I comfortable letting the chips of truth land where they will, even if not where I initially think that they will land?
- Does this align with my moral imperatives:
  - To be honest, to be purehearted?
  - To never stop growing;
to keep updating my understanding of reality consistently with my ever-emerging experience and knowledge?
  - To prioritize conscience above convenience and conditioning?
- Does this involve:
  - Thinking ahead?
  - Honestly offering help, rather than demanding relevance?
Learning before teaching? Honestly valuing others' wellbeing over my own relevance?
  - Taking 100% responsibility for my own preferences and priorities?
  - Honoring others' ownership of their own responsibilities for being themselves?
  - Honoring fairness, by seeking only privileges that align with my developed maturity?
- Does this beckon genuine peace through objective fairness, rather than through local/individual opportunism?
- Am I advancing positive momentum by thinking positively about myself and others?
- Am I recognizing regret as successful transcendence of a less-mature prior paradigm?
- Am I recognizing immaturity, in the big picture, as a transitory phase relative to lasting/stable maturity?
- Do I recognize all souls as ultimately stemming from, and ultimately being comprised of, perfect love?
- Do I know enough, and have I mulled everything over long enough, to actually have a practical opinion?
- If I agree with something and believe that it should be advanced, am I actually taking action to advance it?
- If I disagree with something and believe that it should be stopped, am I actually taking action to stop it?
- Who else's job is it to be the person who I think that I should be?
- Am I wisely/discerningly dispensing and withholding pleasantries in order to help guide/steer/coax the highest good as I understand it?
- Am I being appropriately polite? Am I being appropriately fair?
- Am I wanting others to trust me, without me wisely trusting them first? Why would they do that?
- Am I starting small, and honestly learning/mastering before expanding/replicating?
- Am I making the best use of the local knowledge to which I have the most direct access?
- Am I encouraging an organic direct movement that has more integrity and resilience and an attempted top-down secondhand takeover?
- Am I honestly following my joy- including consideration of its many-layered consequences?
- Am I finding myself lost in my work? (Is it engaging my subconsciousness, in the bliss of dreaming?) Would I more-than-eagerly do it for free?
- Who else but me is responsible for being true to my own heart? Shouldn't I stand up for my own health, in terms of my need to reside in joy?
- When my heart and social language point in opposite directions- am I favoring what is most natural/intrinsic/visceral? My heart?
- Am I contributing to my family/tribe and the broader community? Do I ultimately conceptualize all of reality as my family?
- Am I proceeding on what I believe to be the most ideal path of best easing inevitable social harmonization?
- Is this the most ideal path in consideration of at least the next 7 generations?
- Are the flora, fauna, and overall ecological wellbeing of this area, and all areas, being appropriately supported?
- Am I communicating with Gaia, the conscious body whose skin I help to comprise? Am I net nurturing, rather than poisoning, her?
- Are internal, external, near, far, past, present, and future circumstances being properly accommodated?
- Am I both open/flexible and rigid/firm, each as appropriate, in aligning with truth as I best understand it?
- Does this path honor the creative freedom, corresponding fulfillment, and pureheartedness of everyone involved?
- Does this path responsibly attend to the wellbeing of the planet, solar system, galaxy, Universe, and Multiverse?
- Does this path responsibly account for the consciousness of all souls?
- Does this path help everyone, including me, to grow?
- As appropriate, am I helping to persuade through the use of education/art/theater in conjunction with humor and poignancy?
- Is my messaging coherent (clear, concise, and emotionally-immersively consistently-contextualized as appropriate)?
- Does this path accommodate the possibility that I could be wrong, and may need to change?
- Does this path accommodate sacred course corrections (in-process learning) amidst creativity?
- Am I being overly fixated upon one responsibility, at the expense of my other/parallel responsibilities?
- Does this harmonize with nature, bearing similarities within smaller and larger contexts?
- Does this harmonize with other rightminded parallels?
- Does this harmonize with the quantum realm, and the beyond-infinite Multiverse?
- Does this properly align with the eventual fadeout of my individual relevance to the larger story? Is the baton being properly passed?