Generally, Canadian employers wishing to employ a foreign worker in Canada must first obtain authorization from Employment and Social Development Canada (ESDC), otherwise known as a Labour Market Impact Assessment (LMIA). Canadian employers must demonstrate that employing a foreign worker will not have a negative impact on the Canadian labour market in most cases, and that there is currently no Canadian citizen or permanent resident available to fill the position. This is typically accomplished by advertising the position on several venues, thus demonstrating there was no suitable Canadian for the job. A LMIA is a very rigorous and comprehensive process that is subject to a high level of scrutiny from the government, and thus must be completed without errors.

Although the LMIA process is the rule, there are a number of LMIA-exempt work permits, resulting from Foreign Trade Agreements, such as the North American Free Trade Agreement NAFTA, that enable foreign workers to apply for a work permit without the Canadian employer having to obtain a LMIA. In addition to these employer sponsored work permits, there are a number of work permit options available to foreign workers who do not yet have a job offer, including working holidays, post-graduate work permits, and open spousal work permits.

Australian temporary work visas such as the 482 work visa and working holidaymaker subclass 417 visa may be better options in many cases than the permanent skilled immigration categories. 482 Work Visa: for skilled workers who want to work in Australia for up to 4 years. Workers must be sponsored by an employer to obtain this visa Working Holiday visa (Subclass 417): a very popular option for young people from around the world, this visa allows those aged 18-30 to have an extended holiday in Australia while working to supplement their income. Further Information, help, and advice of experience helping people immigrate to countries all over the World. For more information and advice on Australian immigration law and Australian visa applications please contact us.

Australia is an incredibly popular destination for skilled migrants, with over 128,500 places available in 2015-2016 under the country's General Skilled Migration (Skillselect) program. Under the Skillselect program skilled worker applicants can gain a permanent Australia visa; using their qualifications, work experience and language ability to meet the Australian immigration requirements. The General Skilled Migration (Skillselect) program replaced all other Australian skilled worker visas in 2012-2013. The system has 5 visa subclasses, and is points based; applicants must meet at least 60 points from the General Skilled Migration (Skillselect) points tables to be considered.

WELCOME TO USA

GOBELET

Please note that individuals cant apply directly for an H-1B visa Instead the employer must petition for entry of the employee

The US H-1B visa is a non-immigrant visa that allows US companies to employ graduate level workers in specialty occupations that require theoretical or technical expertise in specialized fields such as in IT, finance, accounting, architecture, engineering, mathematics, science, medicine, etc. Any professional level job that usually requires you to have a bachelors degree or higher can come under the H-1B visa for specialty occupations. If you do not have a bachelors degree or higher you may be able to show degree equivalence through work experience and/or other qualifications.

However, because of the visa cap it is unlikely that an H-1B visa petition will be successful. The US employer petitions for the H-1B Visa in the US which has a duration of up to 6 years.

Applying for a non-immigrant visa is generally quicker than applying for a US Green Card, therefore the H-1B visa is popular for companies wishing to bring in staff for long-term assignment in the US. However, because of the lack of available visas employers frequently have to look at applying for other visa categories such as the L-1B for specialized workers, L-1A for managers and executives, E-2 Treaty Investor visa, E-1 Treaty Trader visa, E-3 for Australians etc.

Foreigners must come from certain government-approved countries such as Malaysia, China, India, Bangladesh, Hong Kong – just to name a few. Please find out your country's eligibility in our online consulting room.

Expats seeking the WP have to be at least 18 YO; the upper age limit is 58 YO for the Malaysians and 50 for other nationalities. Expat's passport must be valid. Holders of WP can work only according to the specifications of their working visa. Getting involved in another employment or personal business is illegal and leads to the visa's cancelation. Work visa demands for the hiring firm: Employer is obliged to pay an employee the declared wages. Contract on WP is subject to such restrictions as a security bond of 5,000 SGD (for non-Malaysian expats), quota, and levy. Quota means that the firm isn't allowed to hire more foreigners on WP than 20% of the firm's staff (15% if the firm operates in the service sector). Levies are monthly payments for a hired unskilled worker. This amount of money is skill-dependent: the lower the worker's skills are, the higher this levy would be. Hiring firm covers the worker's needs for healthcare: buying insurance (15,000 SGD) for the WP holder, paying compensations in case of getting work related injuries, and covering the employee's medical expenses.

Employer is responsible for catering for the WP holder's housing, social and recreational needs. Hiring firm bears all costs of worker's repatriation (buying tickets and so on).

Check what Employment Visas the country where you wish to work offers. Meet the criteria for an EU work visa. Some of the countries will require from you to get a job prior to applying for a visa. Make sure you fulfill these kinds of requirements before applying to get the visa. Collect the required documents for an employment visa. Schedule a visa interview. Attend the interview with all the required documents with you. Wait for you visa to be processed! Keep in mind that this is only the standard procedure to apply for an employment visa in Europe. The exact process may differ from one country to the other. Submit your visa application at the body that represents the country where you will be working, in your country of residence. APPLY Their embassy Their consulate A visa application center. You are highly advised to apply for a work visa to Europe at least two months prior to your trip to the Schengen country where you plan to work in. The reason for that, is because the European embassies make take six weeks to process an employment visa application. In extraordinary cases, the processing time may be extended up to 12 weeks. Most European Work Visas are valid for one year. Still, in most countries, the visa holders have the chance to apply for a visa extension, upon the expiration of their visa.
