CHLOE QUINN

ROMANCE AUTHOR

Chloe Quinn was born in Northern California right in the heart of what is known as the Silicon Valley. There she grew up with her younger sister Alex. Though she was raised in California, Chloe spent most of her summers either in Hawaii, New York, Texas, or Nevada. She still currently lives in California a few miles away from the beautifully eclectic city of San Francisco.

Chloe graduated from a high school located in the south part of San Jose. After high school, Chloe decided to attend a junior college where she graduated with her AA in Humanities. She then went on to attend UC Riverside where she majored in Communication and Behavioral Studies.

One thing Chloe enjoyed while growing up was volunteering at her local hospital. During her life she continued to be in service to others. She went on several missions over the years. On these trips she found herself, along with the group she went with, building structures for children in less fortunate countries in order for them to be able to receive an education, get medical attention, and attend a house of worship, among other things.

Chloe loves to write. This love was sparked for her during her tender years as a child from hearing bedtime stories at night. She loved how someone took the time to sit down to write the dramatic tales filled with brave heroes and strong heroines. She is thrilled she is able to have the privilege of writing stories that she hopes people will enjoy and ignite their love for reading like the stories Chloe heard when she was a child did for her.

AUTHOR Q&A

(Author Approved Interview Questions)

What is your favorite part about writing romance novels?

Thinking of new ways to have my characters fall in love.

How did you start writing? When did you know it was your calling?

I started writing when I was in grade school. I had a creative writing assignment. When I realized I could create anything I wanted, I was hooked on writing and that was when I knew it was what I wanted to do.

What is one thing that you want us to know about you Chloe?

One thing, I am a dog lover.

Where do you draw your inspiration from?

Most of my inspiration comes from my environment meaning everywhere. I love to take the time to see the world around me. Something as simple as walking by a storefront can spark a new story idea.

What is one thing that sets your romance novels a part from other romances?

I would have to say my unique voice. Yes, I stick to the romance genre guidelines, but with my own flair. I will admit that I do push the limits sometimes. I think that is something readers might find exciting and different from other romances out there.

What will someone walk away with having read your books/kindle vellas?

When writing, I try to think of things that make the pages/episodes of my books and kindle vellas intriguing, sexy, thought-provoking. I want them to never want to walk away. I want them to walk to my next body of work.

How do you find time to get everything done?

I must prioritize my work and group my task logically. So, time sensitive things first. Then I try and do one big tasks and group it with several smaller ones so that I can get more done.

What are your characters like?

Strong independent woman who are making their way through life and sexy alpha males guys who are just the right spice to shake up those women's worlds.

What should someone expect when reading any of your titles?

A thrill ride packed full of romance.

What is your favorite workspace to write?

My favorite place to write is anywhere as long as I have my headphones on.

One quick fact about you?

I wanted to be a doctor when I was younger. I actually was pre-med in college until my creative art gene overpowered my doctor gene.

What are a few unique aspects about your blog?

I am candid on it when I post.

You co-host a weekly social media event #FoodParty every Tuesday. Can you please tell us about it?

Well, it all started from the cookbook #FoodParty that I co-authored with romance author and friend Lexi Miles. From there the hashtag game evolved into a weekly chat about food where participants share a line from a work of theirs (WIP aka Work In Progress or Published Work), a picture of a craving, or a random thought as it relates to the weekly theme. Anyone can join us and we always have a lot of fun with it!

One thing that you like doing as an author?

I love to brainstorm ideas..

When you write, do you plan everything or let the story lead?

I like to think that I plan every detail out, but the stories would tell you otherwise. So many times, the story plots have taking their own twists that I find myself writing a completely different story than I first planned. But it's okay, I just have more material to write about later when this happens. (Smiles)

What do you do when you are not writing?

When I am not writing I usually am thinking about writing. Okay that's not all, I also sneak in TV and listen to music. Oh and of course I can't forget the most important things, I play with my dog and I cook. (Giggles)

What is a great read to you?

How Good Can It Get by Alan Cohen. I like books that inspire me to want to make a change in my life and this book is an example of one of them that did just that thing.

Something unique about your writing process?

When I am writing a part in a story and I find myself just staring at the cursor trying to figure out where to go next, I get up and walk around. After that I perform a few other tasks like cook or do laundry to clear my head. This usually takes me about 20-30 minutes. When this little intermission is over, I sit back down and presto, words begin to appear on the computer once more like magic.

Can you explain the 4 Degrees of Chloe and what it has to do with the type of romances that you write?

The 4 Degrees of Chloe are the various heat levels of my novels that range from Sweet (romance for TV), Fire (Sensual and Steamy), Alarm (Erotic), and Magic (Sexy with a twist of Magic). The idea here is that I have the different intensities of Romance available for all readers.

Do you ever use the places that you have traveled to as setting for your stories?

I do. In fact, I tend to mix and match different places to create a new place making the settings like my own Epcot center.

Who is someone that inspires you?

I'm inspired by people who aren't (or weren't) afraid to live their lives. Sometimes we let others stop us from achieving what we really want in life, I admire the ones who continue to listen to their inner voice and push through all of the noise and become what they really want to become.

Best advice for new writers?

Writing is easy, just don't over think it.

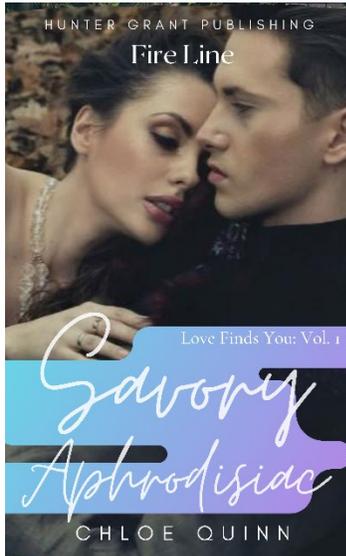

What is one thing that you want to say to your readers as well as to fans of romance novels?

I really appreciate you and I hope to have a long relationship with you guys.
