A MYGA guarantees a fixed rate for a set period of time. The surrender period and the guaranteed rate period match in a MYGA. Be aware of the end of term options. The friendliest MYGA's do NOT reset surrender charges after the guarantee period. Instead the product will simply continue to accumulate with a 0% surrender charge thereafter.

FIA Fixed Indexed Annuities (Accumulation)

The original FIA's were designed to offer a shot at higher than current fixed accumulation rates by allowing the client to participate in an index without the downside risk. Combined with the an annual ratchet that locks in gains, the FIA is a great option for the risk averse saver. The point to point annual reset cap option is one of the simplest and aggressive crediting method. This method is the fastest way to hit the cap as there is no averaging, just a straight look at the increase over the policy year. Look for the highest cap with a minimum cap or "bail out" that is close to the initial cap rate.

SPIA Single Premium Immediate Annuity (Income)

Immediate income needs can be insured using a SPIA. Clients looking to maximize lifetime income can get the most income using a SPIA. The combination of principal and interest being returned is how the SPIA maximizes income while offering a potential tax exclusion as well. If a client is looking for income in the next 36 month a SPIA calculation should be shown as it may kick off the most income and can offer 20+ years of beneficiary guarantees. Most fee based income riders are being triggered sooner than later, it would appear the SPIA is being underutilized in a big way in that case. If maximizing immediate income for the client is the goal the SPIA is often the champion!

Liquidity In Immediate Annuities Does Exist!

I recently met with a sales director from a major carrier. Like many carriers today, the conversation was largely based on income riders since their core fixed products are far from competitive. After exhausting all arguments for an FIA rider over a SPIA for maximum immediate lifetime income, the topic switched to liquidity in the products. Now, aside from interest or systematic withdrawals we rarely receive questions or requests for emergency withdrawals. A common belief is that immediate annuities are not liquid at all and once the contract is issued there is zero cash value. A great thing about SPIAs is that many carriers offer them, adding a bunch of different product features to the overall mix. Income planning has driven these designs over decades. Now, there is a SPIA for nearly all lifetime income needs.

Here is how a most liquid SPIA in our product grid would work

All the below figures are GUARANTEED From Day One!

Male age 67 | $1,000,000 | A+ Carrier | NO FEES
