Greetings Bulldogs,

- help to retain students by adopting a pup and supporting him/her while on campus at SC State via phone calls, visits and care packages, and
- support our beloved Alma Mater.

Please take the time to visit https://scsu.edu/wp-content/uploads/dlm_uploads/2023/01/The-Honor-Roll-Donors-2022-REV.pdf and locate your name on the donor honor roll. THROWBACK MEMORY - WHAT'S UP EVERYBODY

This is the one and only Ms. T. live in the A-T-L..., loyal daughter of S. C. State University from Allendale, SC. Let's get ready to roll back, throwback, and lean back... during my fantastic voyage at S.C. State. Travel with me as I cruise through my time at bulldog nation. Back in the day, I remember when all the students attended sports events on campus. Yes, we had a swim team and a golf team on campus. We went to the student center to get grilled bologna & cheese sandwiches, played spades everyday/anywhere, walked to Diary-O, Brown Derby, McDonald's, downtown Orangeburg, and went to church across the railroad tracks. We couldn't wait to get back to eat that big piece of chicken on Sunday. We bought books from other students for class, remembered phone numbers by memory, and ate three meals per day (hot cooked food).

President Maceo M. Nance (rest in peace) walked from his house on campus with his sharp suits and shoes, spoke to students and made decisions that concerned all of us daily. I don't remember hearing about how high the pollen count was, but Orangeburg was always HOT. Edisto Gardens grew the best looking flowers and our campus was the cleanest ever. Duke's gym was the most affordable night club in the county, and we didn't have to pay for parking because we walked. Put a glide in your side and a dip in your hip and party on down to the mothership connection. Wait for it ... Wait for it ... I hear something... Oh I got to go... The Marching 101 is coming, I hear the bongo brothers with the big drums. Drum Majors (Blow the Whistle ... UP 2 KICK STEP) headed to Oliver C. Dawson Stadium where the MEAC Champs (S.C. STATE BULLDOGS) are playing, Rocking in FULL EFFECT. IT'S HOMECOMING YALL and EDDIE MOE is dropping it to the floor. Eddie, Eddie, Eddie Moe (rest in peace).

Please don't forget that all day registration in SHM. What a rough day that was just to find out you were blocked out of all your important classes that started at 10:00 am, now I gotta get up for all 8:00 am classes... Don't Quit... Living quarters were on point. My home away from home was Thomas C. Miller Hall, yes, I am a Miller Hall sistah and Sojourner Truth Hall sistah. Don't forget dear ole Bradham, Manning, Mays, Lowman, and Bethea provided a roof over many students' heads for years. Don't forget the great professors that knew your name, hometown, and capabilities. They taught us to be proud, respectful, focused, and to reach for success.

Fast forward, I have always rallied to the call, I get up for the Bulldogs of S.C. State. I pay my dues on the local and national level, and I give back every year to my HBCU.... I am Cheryl Thompson '78... the one and only Ms. T. live in the A-T-L.

THROWBACK MEMORY

"Great times with the Marching 101! This was my first performance at the Heritage Bowl in the Georgia Dome back in 1996! Let's go Champagne!"

MENTAL HEALTH MOMENT

April is Stress Awareness Month. Stress is a normal part of life; however, too much stress can cause or aggravate health conditions. It is important to recognize when you are experiencing too much stress to reduce the chances of health risks and improve overall health. A survey by the American Psychological Association found that the five factors most often cited as a source of stress were money, work, family, economic outlook and relationships (APA, 2022). Some signs of stress could be crying more often, drinking, being easily irritated, etc. As summer approaches, think about how you might manage stress.

Here are some helpful tips for managing stress: 1. Take time off, 2. Visit your doctor regularly, 3. Meditation or silencing your mind, 4. Connect with your family, friends, or community, 5. Recognize when you might need more help.

IT'S AUTISM ACCEPTANCE MONTH!

April is here, and so is Autism Acceptance Month! This month, which includes World Autism Day (April 2 of every year), is a time for uplifting autistic voices and sharing in the community's joy. But for Samantha Edwards, an autistic content creator and neurodivergent life coach, the month also signifies an influx of harmful myths about autistic people.

"April is a wonderful month to crack down on that and listen to autistic voices and their stories and listen to their struggles," she says. "Acceptance, at the end of the day, is going to promote more inclusivity."

Autism affects every autistic person differently, and there isn't one way to be autistic. Gross describes it as an ice cream sundae bar: rather than there being set characteristics, the traits of autism can be mixed and matched from person to person.

Here's what autism isn't, Gross says – something to be scared of or pity.

"In truth, autism is just a neutral fact about us, it's not necessarily a good or a bad thing," she says. "It's just the way our brains are."

CHAPLIN'S CORNER

Give It Time (Ecclesiastes 3:1-3,11) – The Rev. Raushanah N. Butler, MBA, MDiv. '99

Late last year, I started working out again after a 6-year hiatus due to illness and extreme grief. I began my new workout plan by going to the gym about 2 days a week and then eventually increased it to 3 days a week. I'll admit, I was hard on myself. I was tired and frustrated initially because I couldn't lift the amount of weight that I use to lift, I couldn't endure the incline on the treadmill like I use to, and using the rower had my shoulders and arms in so much pain that I opted for the bike instead. As of late, I've found myself a bit stronger than I was previous to the break I took and now have increased my workout days to 5-6 days a week.

This experience just reminds me of the scripture Ecclesiastes 3:11, that God "has made everything beautiful in its time". I wanted to rush my healing...emotionally, mentally, and physically; but, it took time. I desired to get back on track as quickly as I fell off. So, I want to remind someone today just as I had to remind myself to give yourself some time. Beyond physical healing, it could be life after divorce...give yourself some time. Navigating a new normal after the death of a close family member? Give yourself some time. Moving on after a friendship ended? Give yourself some time. Trying to get back on track after a layoff? Give yourself some time. Uncover your feelings and allow yourself to feel what you feel, and how you feel it because healing won't happen overnight. Remember Jesus AND therapy works, so again, give yourself some time.

A GREAT MOTHER INDEED

SCSU Alumnae speak on a Mother's Love. Happy Mother's Day to all Mothers! Proverbs 3:15-16 (ESV) says, "She is more precious than jewels, and nothing you desire can compare with her."

I recently lost my beautiful mother, Mrs. Priscilla Brown. My mom was a huge SCSU fan and used to attend homecoming games before I enrolled in SCSU. When State played North Carolina A&T (my daughter's school) in Atlanta, mom wore a custom-made bling tee shirt with

SCSU on the front and A&T on the back. My mother opened her home to many SCSU students. She was the best mother I could have asked for and I am so thankful to be her daughter. Thank you Atlanta Chapter of SCSUNAA for your many acts of kindness. Your expressions of sympathy have done much to lighten our grief. - Evetta Brown Washington '81

Happy Mother's Day Janie R Klugh! I appreciate how you have been there for me unconditionally. You have always known the correct words to say, whether I want to hear them or not. You have been my stronghold in good times and difficult days. You have molded me into the phenomenal woman I am today. I hope and pray that you are as proud of me as I am of you. Momma, I love you more than you will ever know.

Happy Mother's Day My Queen!!! Loving You Eternally, (your middle child) Clarissa Klugh-Scott '85

The Best Mom Award goes to Francina Mack. My mother laid the foundation for me to have a strong work ethic, to always do what you say you are going to do, and to do the right thing. Character is all you have. My mother was my mother and father; she raised my brother and me as a single parent.

I watched her work very hard to make sure our needs were met. We might not have had everything all the time, but we had enough and never went without. With her faith in God that she instilled in us, we were able to persevere through obstacles and become the people we are today. - Sandra Mack '91

Mother, although you are no longer here (1/23/22), your memory remains etched in my heart and the impact you have on my life will live on forever! Without a doubt, you were my source of strength and my pillar of support. Your words of wisdom and guidance still echo in my mind. Sometimes, I hear your voice as if you are here with me. Your unwavering kindness and selflessness were a testament to the incredible mother that you were. Your constant faith in me propelled me to pursue my dreams and your unconditional love gave me the confidence to face any challenge that came my way. You would not allow me to give up when the going got tough. Thank you for everything, Mother. I miss you dearly. I will carry your love and light with me always! - Valerie Wrice '86

THE POWER OF A FATHER

SCSU Alumni speak on the joy of being a Father. Happy Father's Day to all Fathers! Proverbs 23:24 (AMP), says, "The father of the righteous will greatly rejoice, and he who sires a wise son will be glad in him."

My father, Mr. Guss Bodison, Sr., is a Korean War combat veteran who married his childhood sweetheart in 1950. He used his GI Bill to send my mom through college (Clafin) while he attended Denmark Tech (a true love story). He has always been an out of the box thinker and unafraid to try new things. He stepped out on faith to start his construction business when it was an unpopular idea at the time. He used this company to help the church and a lot of kids in our community to go to college or have summer jobs to earn money for school. He has always been one to encourage people to be the best they can be and to strive for higher and not settle for the status quo. Even when I have fallen or failed, he never brought my past up. He only said, keep going forward and never look back. Guss has always been my hero and I don't ever see that changing. -Gus Bodison '91

I am very pleased and honored to be the father of William Patterson. Many alumni watched him grow up from a kid, to a college student and now to the man that he has become. I always tried to instill in my kids real life values. They were always held accountable for their actions. Growing up my wife Paula and I made sure that our kids understood that discipline was just as important as praise and rewards. I am grateful to God for blessing me with a son that believes in God, has a great future ahead of him, understands the importance of being a great husband and one day hopefully a great father himself. Fatherhood is the most rewarding contribution I made to our society. It allowed me to grow up and mature not only as a man but also as a husband. Happy Father's Day to all the Real Men and Real Dads. - Michael Patterson '82

It just seems like yesterday... My wife Stacey and I had been married for a little over three years, and we received the news that we should be expecting a baby boy the following Spring! I attended the "what to expect" classes, practiced changing baby diapers, how to wrap the baby up "like a burrito", and the proper way to hold him. That was the easy stuff. But the actual miracle of becoming a father to a son that morning in 1999 was something that I still cherish to this day. Thinking of all the fun things we will do in the coming years like fishing, playing catch, me playing with a racing track and not receiving funny looks from my wife! Also, teachable moments, like respect, manners, and how to conduct yourself in public. Also, fixing small things around the house, and knowing when to let it go and call in a professional! We recently had a "refresher course" on changing a tire when my wife picked up a nail in her tire. Most importantly, blaze your own trail. This is Mitchell's life, not Dad's. Fatherhood is truly great, and I have a wonderful son in Mitchell. -David Blakely '88

SCSC Alumni speak on the joy of being a Father. Happy Father's Day to all Fathers! Proverbs 23:24 (AMP) says, "The father of the righteous will greatly rejoice, and he who sires a wise son will be glad in him."

It's a great feeling to see that our sons are doing well & making a positive impact in society and the lives of others. It's a testament to the values and guidance that my wife Queen & I and our life-long South Carolina State University brothers and sisters have instilled in them. Now ages 36, 33, and 31 respectively, Justin, Gavin, and Quinton were pretty near model boys growing up and now as men they keep me current with events in their lives, give me advice on age-appropriate swag, and come to me for advice when they are facing a challenge. Queen and I smile and give each other virtual fist bumps when our sons have endless debates on our greatest family vacations, concerts, sporting events, and trips to Orangeburg to see their grandparents and of course South Carolina State University Homecomings. I am a proud dad. -Eric Washington '80

My boys (Kalil & Kol) have been part of Bulldog nation since birth - attending alumni events, football games, and many happenings in between. I truly cherish contributing to their growth and development into young men. To them, every day is 'Father's Day.' To fathers and future Bulldogs, hoping you have a wonderful Father's Day. -Elgin Mazone '93
