CONCRETE
for all streets

MANY accidents on the streets are caused by pavements that are bumpy, raveled, slippery when wet, difficult to clean, obscure at night. These accidents can be prevented by paving with concrete which:

1. Reduces skidding in all weather
2. Has high visibility at night
3. Keeps a true and even surface, free from bumps
4. Drains and dries quickly; no pockets of standing water or mud
5. Encourages traffic to use the full street width—passing is easier

Concrete costs less to build than any other pavement of equal load carrying capacity—costs far less to maintain—cuts motoring costs.

Don't be satisfied with less than clean, safe, enduring concrete on your streets.

Give your public officials credit for selecting concrete pavements. Every community is judged by its streets . . . CONCRETE rates 100%.

BODY OF NOVICE,
DROWNING VICTIM,
RETURNED HOME

Coroner Gives Decision;
Young Novice's Companion
Admitted to Hospital for Treatment.

Salvatore Procopio, 18, of Watertown, Mass., who escaped death in Lake Taconic Tuesday afternoon when his companion, Louis Ansaloni, 17, a Franciscan novice, was drowned, was admitted to the Troy Hospital yesterday afternoon suffering from exposure and shock. His condition was described as "fairly good" by hospital attendants last night.

Procopio's removal to the hospital was ordered by Dr. William J. Phelan, who examined the youth at the home of Harry Nugent at Grafton where he was removed after Tuesday's accident.

Ansaloni's body was recovered in about 17 feet of water by Corp. Kenneth E. Gray of the Newtonville outpost, State Police, within four minutes after the search was started yesterday morning. The body was shipped by train at 12:20 a.m. today from Albany to Boston, Mass., where it will later be taken to the home of the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Ansaloni at Salem, Mass. Rev. Ubaldo DiPrizio, O. F. M., of the Franciscan Monastery here, accompanied the body.

A post-mortem examination was performed by Dr. William J. Phelan at the A. E. Matera undertaking parlors, 290 Fourth Street. Coroner John H. Clinton gave a decision of death by accidental drowning.

The young man's body was found about 200 feet from shore at almost the exact spot where he sank after he and Procopio started to swim for shore.

At the scene also were Capt. John M. Keeley, Inspector O. E. Hegeman and Rev. Thomas De Luca of St. Anthony's Church. The boy was said to have observed his 17th birthday Tuesday.

Lions Honor Past Presidents

Five past presidents of the Troy Lions Club were honor guests last night at a dinner dance in The Hotel Troy attended by 35 couples. The guests, each of whom received a past president's pin presented by Rev. George B. Leckony in behalf of the club, are pictured above. Left to right are Frank H. Richter, Dr. Harry T. Wygant, James T. Whitehurst, Jr., Harry Witcomb and Dr. Alton J. Hull. Dr. Hull gave an illustrated talk on a recent tour of Europe. Dr. Richard P. Doody, president, was toastmaster.

CAST OF CHARACTERS.

Priscilla Pierce—heroine, young woman attorney.

Amy Kerr—Cilly's roommate and murderer's victim.

Jim Kerrigan—Cilly's fiancé.

Harry Hutchins—Amy's strange visitor.

Sergeant Dolan—Officer assigned to solve the murder of Amy Kerr.

Yesterday: Jim calls Cilly while Dolan is in her apartment. When Cilly refuses to divulge who called, Dolan orders her off to headquarters with him while he places police in her rooms to take further measures.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Cilly leaned helplessly against the wall while Dolan proceeded to give orders over the telephone to trace Jim's call.

Jim had phoned from the Pennsylvania Hotel. The operator verified that. He could get out and disappear into the subway in 30 seconds. She felt a subtle pleasure at having outwitted Dolan. He was so sure of himself, so positive in his theory. What did it matter to him that he was railroaded an innocent man to jail; to the . . .

to the electric chair! For the first time, Cilly caught the full significance of what Jim was facing. She held her breath as a new terror seized her.

Dolan was arresting her. There would be nobody to carry on for Jim . . . nobody to watch the Hunter man, or Harvey Ames . . . nobody to check on Carruthers who also came from Utah. Dolan would forget all that.

Suddenly she faced Dolan, her eyes burning with indignation and terror and despair.

"Why are you so determined to accuse Jim? What about Harvey Ames? He had every opportunity and just as good a motive. What about Hunter? There are a dozen angles that you refuse to consider. What about Carruthers upstairs? We have proof that he came from Utah recently. . . . His trip to Bermuda might easily have been a blind or he might have gone away to let someone else use his apartment. . . . What about the Elliott woman upstairs? Surely she's read about the case in the newspapers. Why don't you check on her?"

Dolan frowned in annoyance. "See here, Miss Pierce," he said irritably, "you may be a smart lawyer and all that, but I don't need you to tell me how to do my own work. We've checked every situation thoroughly. We've got the word of a dozen people who saw Carruthers off on the Monarch of Bermuda. I don't go ransacking people's houses unless I've got something on them. Come now, get a hat and coat on; you're going with me."

There were voices in the outer hallway. Cilly recognized them. A second later, her bell rang.

"O. K. Answer it," Dolan ordered.

Cilly opened the door to admit Mr. and Mrs. Perry, who lived next door in Apartment I-B.

Mrs. Perry, a plump, neighborly little woman, held both hands out to Cilly in a motherly gesture.

"You poor dear!" she murmured. "We only heard about it today. I'm so terribly, terribly sorry."

Dolan stood in the living room, taking in the situation.

"Come in Mrs. Perry," Cilly urged. "Hello, Mr. Perry. This is Sergeant Dolan, from police headquarters. Mr. and Mrs. Perry are my next door neighbors, sergeant."

Dolan acknowledged the introduction with a brief nod.

"Oh, this is just too horrible for you, my dear," Mrs. Perry went on. "And to have it happen the minute your young man was called away. . . ."

Cilly's eyes widened. Dolan turned his shrewd glance on Mrs. Perry instantly.

"How did you know Jim was going away?" Cilly asked her.

"Oh, we met him that evening. Didn't we, John?"

"When was this?" Dolan asked abruptly.

"Just about midnight," Mr. Perry stated mildly. "Yes, it was exactly midnight."

Cilly's heart bounded as a new hope dawned.

"Just how and where did you meet the young man?" Dolan asked quickly.

"We met him two blocks further down, on St. Ann's Avenue," he related simply. "You see, we'd stopped in here a little after 11, wasn't it dear? Miss Pierce had offered to look after our fish while we were away. Mr. Kerrigan and another gentleman were here. . . ."

"How did you know which was Kerrigan?" Dolan interrupted.

"Why, we had met him before. One Sunday afternoon, we met him with Miss Pierce down at Jones Beach. We all came home together. So of course when I saw him in such a hurry Sunday night, I was glad to offer him a lift. We'd gotten the car, and had a little bite down in the tavern, and then just as we started off, we saw Mr. Kerrigan, running toward the subway. He seemed in such a hurry. . . ."

"What time was this?"

"Exactly midnight. Remember, Mary, you remarked on it?"

"Yes," Mrs. Perry affirmed. "The steplike clock was just striking midnight. I teased Mr. Kerrigan about being in such a hurry to leave Priscilla, and he explained that he had to make a hurried trip out west. He didn't want to wait for trains, and there was a friend of his—a private pilot—who was leaving Floyd Bennett field at 12:30 for Chicago. Mr. Kerrigan wanted to catch him, but of course because he was in such a hurry he couldn't get a taxi. So we drove him down to the flying field."

"You drove him to Floyd Bennett field Sunday night?" Dolan repeated incredulously. He saw his carefully prepared case crumbling before him.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry nodded simultaneously. "And we got him there in 15 minutes," Mrs. Perry said with pride. "Kerrigan's friend had just arrived himself. It was exactly quarter past 12. We waited around until they took off, and then we started for Fall River."

Cilly could have wept for joy. Jim had been down at Floyd Bennett field at quarter past 12. Amy was killed at 12:20.

There was a lump in her throat as she grabbed Mrs. Perry's hands in both of hers. "Thank you so much for telling us that," she exclaimed. Then, trying to be casual in her explanation, she added: "You know, everybody is under suspicion in a case like this until an alibi is established."

Mrs. Perry nodded smilingly. She did not understand why Mr. Kerrigan, Priscilla's special young man, needed an alibi. But she did not say so.

"Well, we'd better take the goldfish and run along," Mr. Perry suggested. "If there's any way we can help, sergeant, we'll be right next door. . . ."

As the door closed behind the Perrys, Cilly turned to Sergeant Dolan. She could not hide the gleam of satisfaction which lighted up her eyes.

"Well, sergeant, do you still want to hold me as an accessory?"

Dolan slumped into a chair wearily.

"I guess not. Their story rang true enough. . . . and we can always check on it." He looked up at Cilly, smiled a little crookedly. "Well, it begins to look as if there might be some grounds for this faith of yours in the young man. . . . Say, tell me the truth now, will you?"

"Of course. I haven't lied to you yet, but you won't believe me."

"Was tonight the first time you'd heard from Kerrigan or Kerrigan since Sunday?"

Cilly hesitated. Should she tell him about the postcard? It didn't matter now, since Jim was cleared.

"No. I received a postcard from him on Monday, saying merely that he'd been called suddenly to Utah. I didn't hear another word from him until he called just now."

"What did he say?"

Cilly smiled. "If you remember, I didn't give him much opportunity to say very much. Only just got in from Newark Airport and was on his way over here."

Dolan looked at his watch.

"Well, I've got to hustle and check on some of these other angles you've been harping on. If he gets in touch with you again, will you ask him to see me immediately at headquarters? His testimony is still mighty important."

"I'll do that, sergeant."

"Thanks. I hope we'll be working together from now on, Miss Pierce. Sorry about everything."

After Dolan left, Cilly made up her mind as to what she was going to do. There had been altogether too many stones left unturned in this house since Sunday night.
