DeWolfe Boathouse, Boston University:
Cambridge, Massachusetts

Project Challenge:

Located on the banks of the Charles River in Cambridge, the Boston University Engineering project was formally dedicated in September, 1999.

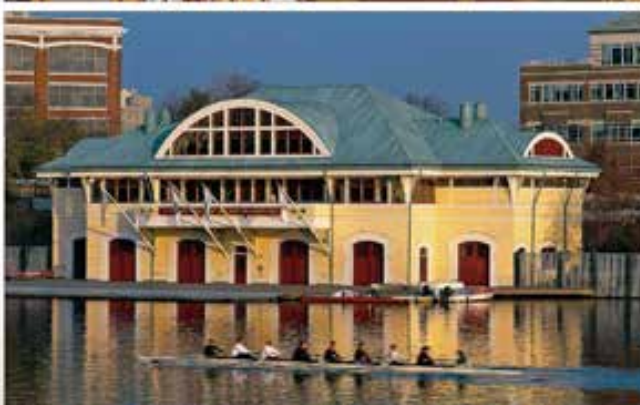

Recall is that of the grandeur of university houses. Richard Spillane, the building's owner, is known to the Boston University faculty and alumni as a leader. The building marks the starting line of the House of the Charles Regatta, the world's largest rowing regatta.

Architectural Solution:

Offering spectacular views of the city skyline, the building was designed to meet the future needs of the university's engineering program. Working in partnership with the construction team, Jeld-Wen designed 100+ windows. Jeld-Wen's design team was able to develop detailed and accurate project drawings and engineering details, adding to the successful completion of the building.

In cooperation with the team for a custom color match to the building's exterior, the Jeld-Wen design team required windows to be made to order to fit the demands of a subterranean facility. Featuring a 20-year warranty, Jeld-Wen's custom wood double hung, sliding and fixed picture windows with maximum glazing provided a clear exterior profile with narrow contemporary window design.

Against the backdrop of the city skyline, the design team in cooperation with Jeld-Wen's design team was able to create windows that met the needs of the building's exterior and interior design.
