Background: Located in the mountains of Valencia, in the village of Baldovar (at 923 meters altitude). Baldovar 923 was born in 2016 as a dream of its four founders and based on the tremendous potential to produce high quality wines given the purity of the soils, climatic characteristics, high altitude, and the old vine indigenous varieties of the area. To make the dream a reality, they restored the wine cellars in the village of Baldovar from a winemaking cooperative (built in 1958) that had closed more than a decade ago. Their 14 hectares of vines are between 20-80 years old and grow at 900-1,200 meters altitude. Their wines are made with as little intervention as possible, both in the vineyards (recently certified organic) and in the cellar using indigenous yeasts with no added fining agents, nutrients, or chemical agents.

Grapes: 100% Bobal from 20-30 year-old vines planted at 960-1,170 meters. Goblet (en vaso) vines.

Soils/Climate: Chalky limestone and sand schists from the Cretaceous and Jurassic periods. High altitude continental climate with significant thermal variation between daytime and night. Less than 350mm of rainfall in 2020.

Viticulture: Organic and biodynamic, respectful pruning, no tractors, minimum tilling, dry farmed, hand harvested, and following the biodynamic calendar of Maria Thun.

Winemaking: Spontaneous fermentation and a light daily bâtonnage. Aged 18 months in 500L French oak and stainless. Minimal total SO2 (14 mg/L). Bottled unfined and unfiltered.
