This course will explore the standards related to activities, both in a typical Assisted Living setting and in a Special Care Unit of an Assisted Living Facility. Areas of focus include: the benefits and types of adult group activities; recognizing and assessing the activity needs of the resident; dementia and other types of cognitive impairment; techniques to assist with communication, behavior management approaches and therapeutic interventions; calendar and program planning and preparation.

Classroom materials will be provided after registration; a certificate of completion will be awarded at the end of the course.
