Virginia National Organization for Women Endorses Russet Perry

LEESBURG, VA – Russet Perry, a former CIA officer and Loudoun County prosecutor, announced the endorsement of the Virginia National Organization for Women in her race for State Senate District 31.

“Russet Perry has spent her career being a champion for her community and for women, and that is exactly what she will continue to do in the Virginia Senate,” said Lisa Sales, President and PAC Chair of the Virginia National Organization for Women (NOW). “From access to reproductive care to the Equal Rights Amendment, Russet will continue to fight for us, and she is exactly who we need in Richmond.”

“I am honored to have the support of Virginia NOW,” said Russet Perry. “They have done great work in the Commonwealth, from advocating for the Equal Rights Amendment to helping pass legislation like the Silenced No More bill, which I hope to help expand when I get to Richmond. I am looking forward to working with them throughout my campaign and in the Senate to continue to protect and uplift women in Virginia.”

Virginia NOW has joined a host of other organizations and elected officials in endorsing Perry in the race for Senate District 31. This seat will be a top-targeted race for both Democrats and Republicans in 2023, and could likely decide who holds the majority in the Senate.
