

2024 PARN RESEARCH CAMP WORKSHOP SERIES.

HOW TO DO INCLUSIVE KNOWLEDGE MOBILIZATION

PARN Research Camp: October 17, 2024

Presented by: Alexis Buettgen and Kelly MacDougall

What is this workshop about?

This workshop explained knowledge mobilization, which means sharing what you learned with others. Presenters explained how to plan and share findings in useful and accessible ways to support goals and action.

Presenters also shared examples of inclusive knowledge mobilization. Participants practiced how to do it.

Why is this workshop important?

This workshop was important because it explained inclusive knowledge mobilization.

Presenters shared that knowledge mobilization is important so that our findings reach the right people at the right time. Participants learned how to make it inclusive and practiced what they learned.

How did they do the workshop at PARN?

In the first part of the workshop, presenters shared information and asked questions.

This helped participants understand inclusive research knowledge mobilization.

In the second part of the workshop, presenters shared examples from their work, including what worked and what didn't work.

Presenters encouraged the participants to do inclusive knowledge mobilization to support their goals and action.
