May 12, 2022 - 9:00 -10:30 am

High turnover rates have pushed organizations to look for solutions to best retain their employees and attract top talent. People leave their jobs for a variety of reasons. At first glance, it could look like there isn't much that can be done when an employee says they are moving or switching careers. The reasons for high turnover that are most often heard seem to be escalating in the present time. It is important for leaders to examine the whole story.

New hires are at the highest risk of leaving, with many organizations losing one-third of these employees. Long-term employees, however, take experience and knowledge with them when they leave. Employee retention is an important strategy that cannot be overstated. Employee retention reduces the high cost of turnover. Participants will explore the main drivers of employee retention and key aspects of measuring turnover.
