The California Chronicle has profiled Lauren Kimball, a college senior whose animated short film "Perchance to Dream" beat out professionals (including a submission from Aardman Animation Studios) to win the Golden Flamingo award in the Viewer's Choice category at the 2009 South Beach International Animation Film Festival. "Perchance to Dream" is based on Kimball's memories of Lolita, a killer whale that has lived in captivity for 40 years at the Miami Seaquarium. More information about the movie can be found at Kimball's website www.solaceskies.com; the trailer is embedded below.
