“The Finding Papa Movie” Wins Best Documentary and Best Director at Life Beyond Life Film Festival

Turin, Italy - The feature documentary The Finding Papa Movie, directed by Julianne Eggold and produced by Joelle Eggold Kohn, received Best Documentary and Best Director at the Life Beyond Life Film Festival awards ceremony, solidifying its place as a standout in spiritual and investigative filmmaking.

The Finding Papa Movie follows two sisters on an extraordinary quest to discover their father’s final resting place, uncovering hidden truths along the way. The film blends true crime, spiritual inquiry, forensic science, and personal storytelling into a transformative and moving cinematic experience.

The LBLFF International Documentary Jury praised The Finding Papa Movie “for its ability to alternate emotional involvement and external observation, giving life to an intimate and original narrative. The journey of the protagonists develops with a compelling rhythm, in which science and the supernatural are harmoniously intertwined, offering an intense and engaging story.”

Director Julianne Eggold also received the Best Director award “for her ability to naturally mix different visual languages, alternating reportage, blogs and interviews in an authentic and original narrative. The direction, free from formalism, gives rhythm and liveliness to the story, enhancing every aspect of the story with creative and engaging expressive choices.”

“Receiving these awards in beautiful Italy is a profound honor,” said Eggold during the festival’s closing ceremony. “This film has always been about the human desire for connection and understanding. I’m incredibly grateful to the Life Beyond Life Film Festival for recognizing our story and the heart behind it.”

LBLFF, now in its fifth year, is dedicated to films that explore consciousness, spirituality, and life after death. It is a wonderfully supportive stage for innovative filmmakers who challenge traditional boundaries, and it stands to open minds and have conversations about the mysteries of existence.
