

To whom it may concern.

I met Jerry Davis over ten years ago at a high basketball game for his daughter Samantha. During a timeout he pulled me aside and made an inquiry about me to explore football. At the time, I was unsure if the recommendation meant that I was a bad basketball official or being a football official seemed to be a better fit. Who knew several years later, that would have the opportunity to be on the same Collegiate football crew as Samantha, as Jerry continues fostering a relationship with me.

For the over the decade, he has constantly had an invested interest in my growth by attending my games, reviewing my films, provided advice & building my network with other officials. He truly was a man of his word and showed a commitment to getting things done.

While his appearance of a “grizzly bear” may intimidate some or be overlooked by others it does not take away his character. Jerry is a man of integrity, great role model, leader of men and trusted mentor. Based on our relationship I hold him in high regard to lead & grow our future officials.

Sincerely,

Kevin Reese
