Duties of a Certified Food Manager:

An owner or operator, through the certified food manager, is responsible for ensuring that:

- Hazards in the day-to-day operation of the food establishment are identified;
- Policies and procedures to prevent food borne illness are developed and implemented;
- Employees are trained to ensure that there is at least one trained individual at all times food preparation activities are conducted who can demonstrate the knowledge required in the Code;
- Food preparation activities are directed and corrective action is taken, as needed, to protect the health of the consumer; and in-house self-inspections of daily operations are conducted on a periodic basis to ensure that food safety policies and procedures are followed.
