Dr. Myrtle P. Alexander Announces Candidacy for Mayor of Washington, D.C.

Washington, D.C. — Dr. Myrtle P. Alexander officially announced her candidacy for Mayor of Washington, D.C., pledging to restore accountability, strengthen public safety, expand opportunity, and confront the city’s homelessness crisis with dignity and long-term solutions.

Dr. Alexander emphasized her commitment to principled leadership and community-centered governance. “Our city deserves a mayor who listens, who leads with integrity, and who puts people first,” she said. “Homelessness is not just a policy issue — it is a moral responsibility. Washingtonians deserve a government that ensures every resident has a pathway to stability and a place to call home.”

Her priorities include revitalizing the local economy, elevating educational outcomes, expanding mental health access, and transforming homelessness through permanent housing strategies and homeownership opportunities. Dr. Alexander invoked the words of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., stating, “The time is always right to do what is right.”

She concluded by calling on residents to join her movement for a stronger, more united Washington, D.C.
