Me Malone,

We are aware there is a parts order for the bodywork. You picked the unit up knowing those things were pending, other than the work outlined in work order CLB-15194A we will do no further service. Your unit is ready, and you did not check it in for any service in Lubbock. It needs to be removed from the dealership property. In the interest of good we have put all new batteries into the unit and will I will extend that deadline to 5:00 PM on July 1st. Or you can accept my previous offer of repurchase in exchange for confidential release. However, once we have the vehicle removed from our lot our offer expires and you can retrieve your property at your cost from the impound.

Sincerely,

Jason Shipley

The last time I checked theft of services cuts both ways. You got paid and I got screwed. This type of behavior does not go over well in a Texas courtroom.

I'll see you there soon !

You have wasted all of the time, of a terminal, disabled person who just wanted to see American, before he departs for greener pastures.

Maybe now you will get off your assess and have a certified check for $10,000,000, delivered today to the Lubbock office.

Excuse me, I did not realize that he was copied on the email.

Hello Brandon, how are you today? I sure hope you can make, this mess, you all find yourself in. And I'm betting that Marcus, dragging, in because he failed to notify the board of directors about my letter. Answer that?

Two, I sent it to your 10 largest shareholders and I received zero response.

So as of today we are looking at Major SEC violations! My letter was dated mid February, or so.

As of yesterday they have made major changes and some magically disappeared from the list all together. I'm sure that the regulators are going to have a field day, grazing on, their dead corporations, who are trying to destroy us all.

This is my first volley. See if you can swat, it back to me?

Just curious, did your law degree come from Harvard or Yale?
