How We Started

In May 2020, Sonya Caldwell co-hosted her first virtual cooking session, bi-coastal from Charlotte, NC, to Kona, Hawaii, with good friends Chef Charles Akau, Author of Big Island Big Flavor and his wife, Jamie Borromeo Akau. The class caught the eye of a local newspaper journalist, and the "Chill, Grill & Bake" class was featured and named The best things to do in Charlotte | May 1-7. Participation exceeded expectations and followed with requests for Sonya to continue offering cooking classes that provided healthy, easy, and affordable meals, entrees, and desserts. Within two weeks, Whatcha Cook'n? was added to the Rosemary Honey brand to bring a unique cooking experience to the culinary community.

Cooking For A Purpose!

During the pandemic, we heard countless stories of students feeling sad about not having birthday parties or milestone celebrations. We want to help make a difference. Our goal: Offer a free Student Celebration Gift Box filled with assorted fresh baked cookies to scholars in elementary, middle, high school and college, struggling and unable to host a celebration for a birthday, graduation, medical recovery, or any other milestone during this tumultuous time. April 17, 2020, we started a GoFundMe campaign with a goal of $1,500. May 4, 2020, Sonya appeared on Charlotte's WBTV QCLive. We've raised $525 and baked over 700 cookies to-date for students, teachers, and essential workers, thanks to our partners who purchased gift boxes for the teachers and essential workers. To keep the momentum going, we are charging participants $15 to attend each cooking segment. Your participation will join our efforts in spreading the word and giving out more gift boxes.
