LASER TREATMENTS

LASER HAIR REMOVAL

Light-skinned and dark-haired individuals are the best combination of candidates for this procedure. Pricing is per treatment, and body hair is treated every 6-12 weeks apart. Facial hair is treated every 4-12 weeks apart. Once you have completed 5-6 treatments, you should only need to touch up treatments once a year give or take hormones, etc.

All pricing is by the "anatomical area." For example, "leg" is the knee to the ankle zone, not the thigh. Pricing is based on an "average size man or woman," so someone "tall or large" (creating an expanded surface area for the lasers to treat beyond average size for pulses and time could cost more), this can be discussed at the time of consult. FDA systems are considered permanent hair reduction. One must remember that these systems work best on dark and coarser hair. That blond, gray, red and fine hair may not respond. One also must remember that hormones can affect hair growth and the hair follicles and can re-stimulate hair follicles to grow. Clients who have tanned used a spray tan, or gone to a tanning booth should avoid getting laser hair treatment to prevent possible damage to their skin until their skin is back to their regular coloring.
