Profitability/Pricing

WHAT IS THE OPPORTUNITY?

“95% of consumers chose a product that gave them a reason to buy.”

ASK YOURSELF.....

How effective is your product programming in delivering new and profitable revenue streams?

Are you regularly achieving your planned ROI on field marketing activities, while also meeting case volume goals?

Are your efforts generating customer interest, increasing retention and creating a buying experience?

Are you meeting market demands with competitive programs, product diversity or interactive campaigns?

How effective are you in meeting your product cost targets in order to improve gross profit margins?

How efficient are your product development projects in delivering a relevant product, at a price that meets your GP% standards and affordable to your target customer?

What investments are being made in improvements that will drive brand/product performance?

What accountability and performance standards do you currently have in place to meet the company's annual objectives?

BRAND IMPACT & SELLING SOLUTIONS

TOTAL BRAND IMPACT PLAN

Every brand needs a defined measurable strategy with quantifiable results. Tips for Successful Selling

The best practice is to find what works for you and use it often. Sales are about people, people who buy and people who sell. At the end of the day, sales is the greatest profession in the world because of people.

1. Start early. Go Long.
2. Nothing interrupts the money hours.
3. People are more important than paper. Calls First.
4. If you're excited about it, they will be excited about it.
5. Network. Network. Network.
6. Close comfortably & confidently.
7. Survey your products. Be aware of the inventory.
8. Know your audience. Know your drinker.
9. Most importantly, know your product.

"Companies with highly aligned sales and marketing departments achieve an average of 32% annual revenue growth, while less aligned companies reported an average 7% decline in revenue."

Customized Sales Training & Brand Strategies

WHAT TO EXPECT

1. Be prepared to change business models.

This may take time and the organization as a whole needs to determine the speed of that change. This will incorporate many different areas of the organization. (e.g. sales, marketing, production, administration)

2. Lead from the top, and integrate the effort.

The idea of sustainability or building “Sustainable Growth” may start as a bottom-up effort, but for sustainability to be successful your team needs to know that top level management has bought into the growth strategy and concepts. This allows for future changes to your business model and marketing plans to be accepted and implemented with ease and confidence.

3. Measure and track company objectives and performance goals.

Many companies use scorecards, KPI (key performance indicators) and other integrated reporting tools. Also, sustainable and realistic growth achievements are implemented into personal accountability performance reviews. This will allow for transparency and understanding of when company sales/marketing benchmarks are reached.

4. A change to products and/or strategy will strongly involve your customers and their connection to them.

Staying connected to your customers/consumers and using their opinions as a direction forward. Use competitors weaknesses and industry trends to elevate your relevance to the market as a whole, allowing your company and targeted demographic to benefit from what you have to offer.

5. Encourage feedback from frontline team members and adapt to specific markets.

Work with your field level team members because they are a vital source for resources and current conditions. By accepting feedback in a open setting you have a greater chance of increasing your firsthand knowledge, your brand/companies image and customers perception. Remaining in touch with a constantly changing and evolving buying environment will provide you with the opportunity to remain connected and increase the chances of achieving sustainable growth seeing a return on your marketing efforts.
