women globally experience violence.

Across their lifetime, around 736 million women are subjected to physical or sexual violence – a number that has remained largely unchanged over the past decade.

Violence Against Women (2021)

The movement to end domestic violence has been built and sustained by the voices and stories of survivors and advocates.

Sharing stories of surviving abuse can be a powerful tool for healing and recovery. It can help survivors reclaim control over their experiences, provide hope to others, and contribute to domestic violence intervention and prevention efforts.

When survivors unite their voices, the power of storytelling is magnified, creating a collective force that can inspire, empower, and foster a sense of community.

Together, our stories can break the silence, challenge stigma, and pave the way for a future where every survivor feels heard, valued, and understood.

We envision a world where storytelling is a transformative force for positive change, where every voice is heard, every story is told, and every heart is touched.
