JUROR Dr. Karen Blough is a historian of medieval art and professor at SUNY Plattsburgh, where she teaches courses on ancient, medieval, and early modern art history. For the past two years, she has also served as interim director of the Plattsburgh State Art Museum. Professor Blough received her doctorate from Rutgers University in 1995 with a dissertation on a late tenth-century illuminated manuscript from southern Germany. For many years, her research has focused on issues of religious women's patronage of the visual arts in the Middle Ages, particularly at medieval German convents. Recently, she has become interested in the illustration of Ashkenazi haggadot, and will present her research on the mid fifteenth-century First Darmstadt Haggadah at the annual conference of the Early Book Society in Dublin, Ireland, in July. Karen lives in Plattsburgh with her husband Bill. During her spare time, she can usually be found with her nose in a book.
