

The Necessity of Spiritual Independence and the Bible

Robin Calamaio – Copyright 2008

freelygive-n.com

Human beings are a curious mixture. On one hand, we are social and operate in group ... yet, at the same time, each person is a unique individual unit. It is important to understand what things are okay in group, but it is equally important to understand what things must be solo. As Christians, we become part of a group - the body of Christ. Yet, we remain an individual. "(Y)ou are Christ's body, and individually members of it." God not only places "the members, each one of them, in the body, just as He desire(s)" but also grants spiritual gifts "to each one individually just as He wills" (1Cor 12:11,18 and 27). In this group, individuality is never lost. In fact, with imparted gifts it is enhanced! But, ... let's go back one more step.

The most important, the most crucial, indeed the most non-negotiable of all solo actions, centers on the salvation issue. This is a transaction fully between an individual and his/her Creator. It is the most solo of all activities. And it puts us in the weakest of positions because "all things are open and laid bare to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do" (Heb 4:13). It's no wonder we hide "in the trees" like Adam - looking for cover (Gen 3:8). It is ironic that the shield of choice is often ... religion.

In this context, I want to look at the Christian religion.

The Christian Religion

In my mind, the Christian religion and the Christian faith are two different things. It is not imperative that you adopt my demarcation between the two, but if you think (for this moment) in the framework I am presenting, the following discussion will make more sense. When I think of religion, I think; "ceremony, ritual, dogma - and formulas for these things." When I think of faith, I think; "inquiry, study, knowledge - and persuasion of what is true."

Using this definition, the Christian religion ... is easy. There is a "formula" for salvation - followed by clear directives for "the good Christian life." Altar calls, confirmations, or baptisms are soon followed by church membership, tithing, and the church calendar.

It is a natural weakness for man to fall into religion. The reason is really quite simple. Religion tells the follower everything he/she must do. The directives are not to be questioned - just obeyed - and everything will be fine. Many people feel like they have actually accomplished something by following religious orders. That often brings great comfort ... hence religion's appeal. But, that does not translate ... into life.

The Christian religion is built upon two pillars. First, those in the pew are sheep who must be led. And the second pillar is (you guessed it) - the leaders. They are to be obeyed. Two huge blunders are created by this model. First, calling Christians "sheep" is a "figure of speech" - not to be overplayed (Jn 10:6). Sheep are portrayed as defenseless, naive and stupid (But, they only respond to their master's trustworthy voice ... and pay no heed to a stranger's voice [Jn 10: 1-5,16,27]. People would do well to imitate this. They often follow "strange voices" ... who lead them into death). But, where does Ezekiel's verse fit in the "dumb sheep" analogy? "'As for you, My sheep, the sheep of My pasture, you are men, and I am your God,' declares the Lord" (Ezek 34:31). This is consistent with Paul's admonition to the wayward Corinthians: "in your thinking be mature ... Be on the alert, stand firm in the faith, act like men, be strong" (1Cor 14:20 and 16:13). Where is it that God calls His children - to be stupid sheep?

Secondly, the leaders of the Christian religion are exempted from this "figure of speech." They are over the dumb sheep. But, they themselves ... are not dumb sheep. One of the most oft quoted passages supporting this position comes from Hebrews: “Obey your leaders and submit to them; for they keep watch over your souls, as those who will give an account. Let them do this with joy and not with grief, for this would be unprofitable for you” (Heb 13:17). At first blush this confirms the religion model - sheep are to obey leaders. But, a short grammar lesson will produce a different story.

This English translation (from Koine Greek) contains at least three problems.

First, in the English translation: “Obey” is a verb in the active voice. But in Koine Greek, this is a verb in the passive voice. The passive voice means the subject is acted upon - not doing the action. The actual word translated, “obey” (peitho) has several potential meanings (just as English words do). “Peitho” is a word built upon the concept of persuasion - not unquestioned, blind assent.

Second, in the English translation: “leaders” is a noun. But, this is a participle in the Greek - not a noun. A participle is a verbal adjective. There is a huge difference between “the leading ones” and “leaders.” In this instance, “the leading ones” refers to the more mature Christians “of you all” (a plural genitive). They seek to persuade the less mature by instruction and example - and call for imitation. “Be imitators of me, just as I also am of Christ” (1Cor 11:1 - and this is the Apostle Paul ... to the Corinthians!).

Third, in the English translation: “to them” is a prepositional phrase. This is not in the Greek at all and should just be forgotten.

Hebrews 13:17 should be translated more like this: “You must allow yourselves to be persuaded by the leading ones of you all ... and yield.” The less mature are commanded to allow themselves to be persuaded (passive) by the more mature among them - and then yield to accurate handling of the word of God (doctrine and lifestyle) - not to them. This is totally consistent with all the other foundational Biblical injunctions of the Christian faith. “Examine everything; adhere to that which is good” (1Thes 5:21). The Bereans “were more noble minded than those in Thessalonica ... examining the Scriptures daily” to see if Paul’s assertions were correct (Acts 17:11). “Test yourselves to see if you are in the faith; examine yourselves!” (2Cor 13:5).

Those who are leading must account for how they led. But, they are not responsible for wrong choices by their listeners (assuming they had led correctly). Paul was not guilty before God for the errant choices of the wayward Corinthians or the bewitched Galatians. Their choices did bring him grief ... but not guilt.

I do not know why the Hebrew passage has been so mangled by translators. If you can find a Greek scholar who can explain this - let me know (“Peithesthe” is not a middle deponent verb to be translated active either). By the way, Jesus did talk about leaders one time. “Do not be called leaders; for One is your leader - Christ” (Mt 23:10). Does He need to repeat Himself?

The Christian Faith

This arises when individual circumstances converge on a person - forcing an intense search ... for the Creator. While God may use people, or even some of the structures of religion as cited above, these things are secondary (at best). The Christian faith is the search for God. “As the deer pants for the water brooks, so my soul pants for Thee, O God. My soul thirsts for God - for the living God” (Ps 42:1,2). Furthermore, He tells us, “You will seek Me and find Me, when you search for Me with all your heart” (Jer 29:13). This is hard. In fact, I don’t think we can really know when we have truly sought Him with all our heart. Duplicities, known and unknown, infest us.

God calls people to the Christian faith. Of necessity, this requires spiritual independence from man. No one can get into heaven on the coattails of another. Adhering to the greatest of preachers ... will not work. Supporting, or participating in, the most fruitful Christian church ... will not move God to accept that one. Even heart wrenching pleas to God by the most devout mother ... will not usher one into glory. There is but One Advocate before God the Father who can make a successful case for one's inclusion into His favor (1Jn 2:1). And one must deal with Him solo. Nothing we will ever undertake is more solo - and absolutely necessary.

The extreme emergencies of life ... are faced alone. The only One who can help us - is God. When Stephen was being stoned to death, he needed Christian faith - not some version of the Christian religion (Acts 6 and 7). Our exit will be different, but our need - at our departure - will be the same. The Christian faith requires spiritual independence from man ... and total spiritual dependence upon Jesus Christ.

* * * * *

Learn More!

Bible position on Abortion:

Visual Gospel Presentation:

Find these, and other FREE ebooks and articles at freelygive-n.com!

Robin Calamaio:

BA, Bus Admin (Milligan College '90)

Master of Divinity (Emmanuel School of Religion '92).