HOW OUR CEO SAVED HER FAMILY'S ESTATE

Ms. Simms' mother-in-law wanted her grandkids to inherit a legacy that would give them a head start in life. The problem with Ms. Simms' family estate began when a relative (who was not an heir to the estate) allowed their adult son to live in her mother-in-law's home. After this, they found that the house had been ransacked for important personal documents and discovered that life insurance policies were missing. The individual who had taken the policy had pledged it towards an expensive funeral, this event alone cost the estate thousands of dollars. But the estate mismanagement doesn't end there.

Ms. Simms' mother-in-law was overcharged for medical expenses and was charged for items that were not meant to be paid out of pocket. After finding the inaccuracies in her mother-in-law's general bills, credit card statements and medical bills, Ms. Simms pursued legal action. All erroneous charges were overturned after a prolonged process of presenting documents to the ALJ (Administrative Law Judge). She secured a total of $10,000 in reimbursements and in total saved the estate $18,000! The bulk of the money recovered was located from the medical facility charging her incorrectly.

By completing estate administration audits and other money-saving services, through VeriAccount LLC Ms. Simms is saving her clients thousands of dollars while also guaranteeing accurate and secure estate accounts.

Medical (and general) bill, identity theft and creditor claim fraud are incredibly common. In the United States, estate heirs are invoiced for 80% of medical expenses after the death of their loved one. Estate administrators can use VeriAccount to protect the assets of their loved ones, ensuring that they are not lost or wasted.
