

Pictured here is a likeness of Ladd's Dream Vision image (page 270) "seen" several weeks before the November 8th, 2016, presidential election. He emailed the description to Jagers that morning and indicated this meant Trump would become the 45th president. She replied that she had painted two plaster of Paris butterflies just that night. She had painted them individually with blue, purple, and red paint. The blue "Hillary" creature is impaled on her left "spike". And the majestic, winged aspirant sits eagerly on his right "perch", awaiting the destined moment to soar into the White House.

