

At the NPCAC, we respond when a child has experienced sexual abuse or other crime, stepping in at one of the most critical moments in that child's life.

Our team brings together a coordinated, compassionate response for children impacted by crimes such as sexual abuse, physical abuse, neglect, and other forms of violence. Through this process, we begin to restore safety, stability, and hope – not only for the child, but for their entire family.

Our services include forensic interviews, referrals for specialized medical exams, family advocacy, trauma-focused therapy for children, and therapeutic support for non-offending caregivers. Each service is a vital step on the path toward healing.

Because of this work, children do not have to navigate trauma alone. They are met with care, believed, and supported while our staff and partners work together to protect their well-being and help them move forward.

The Process

1. Interviewing – combines the information gathering into one interview, thereby reducing the number of people to whom your child has to tell their story
2. Medical Exam Referral – may receive a referral for a medical exam to ensure they are healthy and not at risk of further complications.
3. Family Advocacy – will assist with obtaining services, provide support and serve as a link between you and law enforcement and/or social services
4. Specialized Therapy – all children and families have the opportunity to receive therapy services

At the Northern Plains Children's Advocacy Center, we believe that the healing journey for a child survivor of abuse should never be walked alone. When you donate, you aren't just giving money—you are providing a lifeline.
