

US Election 2020 – What is coming may well be from the unseen

17th October 2020

“Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. For by it the elders obtained a good report. Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the Word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.” (Hebrews 11:1-3, King James Version Bible)

“And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, ‘Lord God of Abraham, Isaac and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy Word. Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the Lord God, and that thou has turned their heart back again.’” (1 Kings 18:36-37, King James Version Bible)

“He (King Nebuchadnezzar) answered and said, ‘Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.’” (Daniel 3:25, King James Version Bible)

There is no denying that the US election this year is going to be a watershed moment not just for the country, but the entire world. The stakes cannot be said to be any higher for both parties as their constituents know that whoever wins, the other side will basically be unable to make a comeback. This is no hyperbole as we have seen with the unprecedented events this year – the sudden death of Iranian military leader, General Qassim Suleimani, the attempted impeachment of President Trump by the Democrats, the Wuhan/coronavirus epidemic that led to the world virtually shutting down, the massive nationwide floods in China, the riots by Antifa and Black Lives Matter across the US and many more.

Now, on the topic of who will win this election, polls have been largely pointing to a comfortable win by the Democratic nominee, Former Vice President Joe Biden. At best, President Trump may win and gain a little ground from his unexpected victory in 2016. Casting aside the heavily skewed media-run polls, I have narrowed it down to the best estimate to be that President Trump may win the election but see a net decline of 1-2 states. This puts him at 275-290 electoral votes.

However, I do believe that the final outcome is going to be a landslide for President Trump, in such a style that not even the most bullish publicly-known pollster, Helmut Norpeth who predicts on his site <http://primarymodel.com> that President Trump has a 91% chance of winning and have 362 electoral votes, can explain what actually happened. I personally believe that should this happen, it is only attributable to the Lord God. I will explain this in the rest of this article.

In the final weeks leading up to the 2016 election, pollsters were calling the Democratic Nominee, Former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, to win this election with a probability exceeding 75%. She was expected to win around 290-330 electoral votes, against Trump's 210-240. The pathway to a Trump victory was expected to be conditional on winning Florida, Ohio, Michigan and New Hampshire. During the night, the map started to turn from blue to red, firstly Florida, then Ohio, then Michigan and the political analysts were shocked. As the night wore on, it was evident that the next president would be Donald Trump. So unexpected was the night that President Trump admitted he had arranged for a smaller ballroom for his party as he did not want to concede in a large ballroom. His opponent did not even have a concession speech as she had been ready to measure out to move into the White House.

When vote counting ceased, President Trump had picked up six more states that his predecessor, Senator Mitt Romney, had won – Florida, Iowa, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin. He had scored a solid victory beyond what pollsters could explain, especially in his ability to even gain Iowa, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin. The map of how counties voted in the US was even more stunning – the country went largely Republican, with the major cities and some suburbs dotting the country as Democrat strongholds. Much of the country shifted towards the Republicans, against consensus expectation.

What happened is inexplicable by many. However, Christians played a significant part in making it happen. Many decided to vote after sitting it out for over two terms since they were disillusioned by the false Christian George W. Bush administration. They had also seen how the Obama administration had acted in blatant opposition to their faith and lifestyle and they felt they could not sit back any longer. The evangelical, Pentecostal and independent Christian voters came out in droves once more and painted the country red.

Now four years on, the country is even more divided than before. Since the victory for President Trump, his opponents removed their disguise of merely standing for their values but declared open war against the administration. The Democrat Party, Hollywood, the corporate media, university academics, anti-Trump Republicans and several non-government organisations embarked on a multi-pronged assault through accusations of Russian collusion, quid pro quo with the current Ukrainian government, impeachment, street riots, protests and coordinated media coverage aimed to undermine and unseat him. We also saw the overt silencing and removal of conservative viewpoints in the public through cancel culture and outright violence. I need not remind you of what have transpired as it is ubiquitous. In fact, those who are still reading this article at this point are likely to have seen through the assaults and be willing to take a more reasoned and rational perspective over this whole matter.

As we approach 3rd November, the US population is anxious on both sides of the aisle and in the middle. Many acknowledge that there is likely chaos and violence coming out of the election regardless the winner or the magnitude of the victory. What is egregious though, is the coalition of Democrat leaders, tech company giants, corporate media, Hollywood and billionaires like George Soros, the Rothschilds, the Rockefellers and many others, have put it clearly to the public that the only viable option is a landslide by VP Joe Biden. All other options will lead to disputes about the results and will no doubt descend the country into deeper chaos. They laid this out in a document known as the Transition Integrity Project, which was leaked out into the public. They have put it out there – it is their way or the highway to hell.

So, what values does this coalition, also known as the cabal or the Deep State, hold? They stand for globalism, oligarchic rulership where they hold power and wealth to redistribute to those that agree with them, licentious living, destroying the family unit and decadence as well as going against the Judeo-Christian values of the western society. They openly denounce Christian values, mock the Lord God, create a counterfeit Jesus Christ and find opportunities to silence the practice of worship.

Very recently, the New York Post released the contents recovered from the hard drives of notebook computers that belonged to Robert “Hunter” Biden, son of VP Joe Biden. The contents included emails linking Hunter with Ukrainian and Chinese business and government officials detailing how he arranged to use his father’s Vice Presidency and influence to win business contracts in order to enrich their family. Emails with family members also lay out how he acted as the breadwinner in the wider Biden family as they wanted to try and separate the source of income from Joe while he was in office. It also showed that Joe would take as much as half the income that Hunter generated for the family and that he may have owned stakes in these companies vicariously through his son. Upon this release by the New York Post, social media giants Facebook and Twitter began censoring and suppressing accounts of those who shared this news link, including even the Trump Campaign, White House Press Secretary Kayleigh McEnany, and several government officials experienced first hand how they were unable to post links of this article. The corporate media largely remained silent except for Washington Post writing an article that dismisses this off-hand without confirmation or backing evidence and certain TV commentators made mention of this and summarily dismisses it as conspiracy theory. These outlets are the same that broadcasted wall to wall coverage of scandals against the sitting President. These scandals did not stand the litmus test of truth when the officials, media personnel and staffers involved were subpoenaed to testify in the House and Senate Committees under oath and all walked back on their claims or even said the very opposite of what they said on air.

With these events still unfolding, I have followed conservative media commentators that provide more reasoned and evidence-backed analyses that seem to agree that President Trump should expect to win this election but likely with a narrower margin. They back this up by taking into account large attendances in rallies held by President Trump vs the small gatherings held by Biden, higher voter enthusiasm for President Trump over Biden, the looming threat of mail-in ballot fraud and the entrenchment of the left and right to their sources of information and reinforcement of their views on the hot button issues as well as the candidates’ competency and character. The states that are in focus for this election include Arizona, Florida, Georgia Michigan, Minnesota, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Texas and Wisconsin. The expected outcome is that President Trump may likely win Minnesota but could potentially lose Arizona, Michigan, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin. Thus, the margin seems to be wafer thin. According to the Democrat and tech giants’ Transition Integrity Project, such a win would fall well within their region of questioning the election outcome and them mobilising their supporters to take to the streets in the hope to unseat the President in a coup.

Now, I believe that the corporate media with their polls and self-cited news reports have proven they lack credibility and are nothing more than the marketing and communications arm of the Democrat Party. Indeed, I say this not in jest, but the Democrat National Convention and their campaign boards and committees comprise of executives from these companies. To think that because they dismiss this as a smear and unfounded argument is to exercise a lack of critical thinking and to not understand the basic definition of conflict of interest. These points provide sufficient grounds to dismantle accusations of my right-wing bias and delusion of reading reality based on sources perceived to be one-sided. Quality information wins against quantity.

Looking beyond what is seen, we now move to what is more heartening to those hoping for a victory by President Trump and also a pathway to a country to heal itself after so much damage and pain. Many Christian believers have seen the unexpected providence from the Lord God during these last four years, starting with the victory in 2016. Despite the incessant and vicious attack by his enemies and also against Christians in general, we have seen these attacks not hit their mark and, in some cases, backfired. Regarding the left in general, they have become splintered as time passed due to their intersectionality and struggle for power leading to cannibalism among their own. The transgender bathroom bill by Former President Obama has pitted feminists against transgenders as the latter lobby to be allowed to participate in female sporting competitions. The #MeToo movement that was mobilised to stop Associate Justice Brett Kavanaugh from being nominated onto the Supreme Court has led to the conviction of Hollywood director Harvey Weinstein as well as the resignations of several executives and personalities in the corporate media companies when women came forward with their stories and testimonies. The Russian collusion hoax and the failed impeachment of President Trump have led to the reverse investigation against the Biden family, the Clinton Foundation and even showing the depth of corruption in the Obama Administration, with a clear paper trail showing how their smears were used to divert attention from their own criminal activity.

And, in September, just when things could not look more dire for the left, Associate Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg passed away at age 87. This handed President Trump his third nominee to the Supreme Court and he has selected Judge Amy Coney Barrett. The imminent appointment of Judge Barrett, a staunch Catholic mother of 7, judge of exceptional intelligence and a squeaky clean record, leaves little to doubt that she is not being admitted into the Supreme Court by sheer coincidence. Her appointment is a harbinger of the beginning of the repealment of Roe vs Wade and the removal of legally funded killing of babies in the country. Unbeknownst to many, killing babies is a pagan practice performed and has a long history stretching back to the dawn of time. The societies that still believe in the spiritual realm recognise the power that can be derived from demonic spirits through the offering of the blood of the innocent, the younger the better.

For this to happen, the Christians understand that the President must win the election and retain the Senate as well as even try to win the House back. This seems to be not only a tall order, but an inconceivable goal based on what we observe. But, like 2016, it is possible that the events transpiring as the votes are being counted may see the map turn even more Republican than last election. I am not saying it will, for God's Way is above ours. However, while people look at New Hampshire, I will be looking at New Jersey and New York, while people look at North Carolina, I am looking at Virginia, while people look at Michigan, I am looking at Delaware, while people look at Nevada, I am looking at New Mexico and while people ignore the west coast as it is a blue fortress, I am looking for the walls of the blue Jericho come tumbling down. Should some or all of these things happen, or even more, we know what is going on.

Such things may not occur, or it unfolds differently. However, I believe that the experts who have resolved themselves to believing they have the explanations for what will happen on the night of 3rd November could well be in for a bigger surprise than they can imagine. Should this occur, let the readers understand that the Lord God may well have just done it again, to show that even the best plans us mere mortals make are no match for Him.
