of Canada. Section 1, 7 and 24 of the Charter are inconsistent with the preamble and section 91 of the Constitution Act because they allow a violation of civil liberties that are protected under these sections. And the constitution of Canada is based on the supremacy of God who accords human rights and fundamental freedoms, and the Charter undermines this in section 1 by indicating our rights and freedoms come from the Charter; "guarantees rights and freedoms set out in it", i.e. rights are issued by the government. Under section 1 of the Charter the government can violate our rights without first going through Parliament or the court. Therefore, these sections of the Charter are unconstitutional and therefore have no force or effect of law under section 52.

This supreme law of Canada in the preamble states: "WHEREAS the Provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have expressed their Desire to be federally united into One Dominion under the Crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, with a Constitution similar in Principle to that of the United Kingdom". Based on this preamble the Supreme Court of Canada decided in 1938 case law, The Bank Taxation Act; The Credit of Alberta Regulation Act; and the Accurate News and Information Act, SCC, that Canada has an implied bill of rights and that civil liberties is a matter of Federal jurisdiction and the provinces do not have the power to pass law that undermines civil liberties.

This supreme law includes protection of civil liberties also under section 91. In section 91 it designates civil liberties as exclusive, federal jurisdiction because it is not designated to the provinces. Section 92.13 which designates all provincial authority only states civil rights, not civil liberties. Therefore, civil liberties codified in the implied bill of rights and the Canadian Bill of Rights are federal jurisdiction and have constitutional authority under the preamble and section 91.

The Canadian Bill of Rights recognizes that our rights come from God. "An Act in Recognition and Protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms". And in the full content of the Bill, unlike the Charter it does not claim rights come from the state.

Canadian Bill of Rights Preamble states; "The Parliament of Canada, affirming that the Canadian Nation is founded upon principles that acknowledge the supremacy of God, the dignity and worth of the human person and the position of the family in a society of free men and free institutions.

Affirming also that men and institutions remain free only when freedom is founded upon respect for moral and spiritual values and the rule of law;

And being desirous of enshrining these principles and the human rights and fundamental freedoms derived from them, in a Bill of Rights which shall reflect the respect of Parliament for its constitutional authority, and which shall ensure the protection of these rights and freedoms in Canada:"

Therefore, this notice of liability does not rely on the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, it relies on the supremacy of God enshrined in the Canadian Bill of Rights which has constitutional authority from the preamble and section 91 of the Constitution of Canada and common law.

1. Canadian Bill of Rights:

3. Common Law Precedent:

Implied Bill of Rights: The Bank Taxation Act; The Credit of Alberta Regulation Act; and the Accurate News and Information Act, 1938, SCC:

The Credit of Alberta Regulation Act; and the Accurate News and Information Act, SCR 100,1938

Summary: The Supreme Court of Canada ruled on the Reference re Alberta Statutes that restricted the media from criticizing the government. It found that the Accurate News and Information Act, along with the others submitted to it for evaluation, was ultra vires (beyond the powers of) the Alberta government. In the case of the Accurate News and Information Act, the court found that the Canadian constitution included an "implied bill of rights" that protected freedom of speech as being critical to a parliamentary democracy.

Jones v Tsige, 2012, ONCA:

Summary: The Ontario Court of Appeal declared that the common law in Canada recognizes a right to personal privacy, more specifically identified as a "tort of intrusion upon seclusion", as well as considering that appropriation of personality is already recognized as a tort in Ontario law. Meaning that one can sue for breach of privacy.

Roncarelli v Duplessis, 1959, SCC:

... every official, from the Prime Minister down to a constable or a collector of taxes, is under the same responsibility for every act done without legal justification as any other citizen. The Reports abound with cases in which officials have been brought before the courts, and made, in their personal capacity, liable to punishment, or to the payment of damages, for acts done in their official character but in excess of their lawful authority. A colonial governor, a secretary of state, a military officer, and all subordinates, though carrying out the commands of their official superiors, are as responsible for any act which the law does not authorize as is any private and unofficial person."
