Amy - My Genius

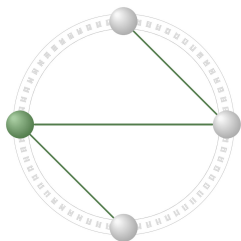

My Life's Work · What I'm here to do · Gene Key 5

Your life's work revolves entirely around recognising and understanding patterns. What you do in life needs to be based upon the repetition of patterns. Repetition is a very powerful thing for you. This is why you have to find the thing that you love in life — because then you will never find it boring. Repetition of the thing that you love will eventually lead to mastery, and mastery leads to true fulfilment in your life. Without repetition, you will never be able to take those rare quantum leaps that will always come unexpectedly at different times during your life. Your other great gift is your ability to see things clearly in a logical way, which gives rise to your ineffable quality of patience. Your patience also makes you a natural teacher or guide for others.

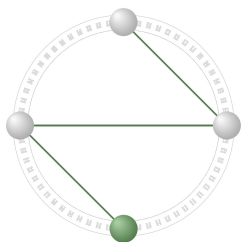

My Evolution · What I'm here to learn · Gene Key 35

The great challenge for you is to make room in your life for the miraculous to occur. It is likely that your lifestyle does not allow you a great deal of time to dream and drift. Your Evolution cautions that if you do not create more space in your life, then your life will simply fly by and you will miss it. In order to feel the current of adventure that is a part of your destiny, you must get out of the loop of trying to reach a state in the future which will give you more time. The time you need is right here and right now, and all you have to do is risk trusting in your heart. Your life will keep calling you to this same crossroads to choose either to go back on the treadmill or make a quantum leap right through your fear.

My Radiance · What keeps me healthy · Gene Key 64

Your health depends on your letting go of your mind's need to solve everything. Your hidden Gift is being able to see things that others have difficulty in understanding, but often at the expense of your own inner peace. You can be a deeply tranquil person, but only if you allow your mind to simply stay confused at times. Rather than becoming stressed and trying to resolve your confusion during such times, you need to relax inwardly and wait patiently. These can be very restful periods for you if you allow them to be. Your mind likes to resolve things in an abstract way, which means that it resolves them in its own time, and probably whilst you are asleep. One day, you simply wake up, the pressure is gone, and the issue is suddenly clear to you. If you are patient with this process, you will avoid an enormous amount of self-induced and unnecessary stress.

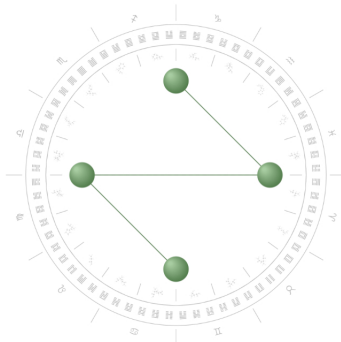

My Purpose · What deeply fulfils me · Gene Key 63

You are here in the world with one purpose — to question everything and still remain entirely open. Your whole life is an inquiry into life. You may learn an enormous amount whilst you are alive, but none of this knowledge is the reason why you are here. You are also here to inspire others to remain as open as you are. Wherever you see dogma or opinion, your role is to expose it as one-sided and therefore incomplete. You are not here to necessarily offer people solutions. You are here to expose the doubts and fears that lie inside them, so that they can find their own way. At times, you may wonder deeply about whether your life is truly of value. The answer is always yes. Just because you can see both sides of everything does not mean that you cannot have opinions. On the contrary, it allows you to have truly informed opinions. It is out of your open-mindedness that you will discover your greatest gift - how to tread much more lightly through life than those around you. It is for this lightness, more than anything else you might learn or achieve in life, that you will be most remembered.
