CEO Reflections

As CEO of Jump 4 Books, I am filled with gratitude for the community that surrounds this work. Three years into this work, I am reminded daily that Jump 4 Books is more than a literacy initiative – it is a movement rooted in joy, representation, and possibility.

This summer reminded me that literacy is a collective effort. When we work together, children feel supported, families feel empowered, and classrooms feel brighter. That moment – the spark, the smile, the connection – is why we do this. And it's why we will keep pushing forward, growing our reach, and strengthening our programs.

Thank you for believing in this mission and helping us build confident, joyful readers. As we move into the next quarter, I'm excited to deepen our impact, expand our partnerships, and continue bringing joyful, culturally rich reading experiences to every child we serve.

With Gratitude,

Rachelle

Celebrating National Literacy Month at Montclair Elementary

Over 500 Montclair Elementary scholars kicked off the school year with brand-new books and big smiles. These photos capture the joy, pride, and excitement as students received books to take home — a beautiful ending to National Literacy Month. A heartfelt thank you to the Montclair administrative team for your partnership and support; your leadership makes moments like this possible.

Behind the Scenes

Our prep room was buzzing as volunteers sorted, labeled, and organized hundreds of books for our first two distributions of the year - Montclair ES & Peyton Forest ES. From building colorful grade-level bins to staging tables packed with joyful stories, every moment was full of energy and teamwork. These snapshots highlight the hustle, the heart, and the excitement that make book joy possible for our scholars.

Looking Ahead: National Book Month in October

October is coming in HOT — and Jump 4 Books is ready to ride that wave of book joy straight into National Book Month. This is our moment to celebrate stories that make kids laugh, think, dream, and feel seen. All month long, we'll be spotlighting culturally rich books, sharing scholar favorites, and bringing even more joyful reading experiences to classrooms across Metro Atlanta. With fresh distributions, volunteer days, and book-centered surprises on deck, October is shaping up to be a vibrant, high-energy celebration of everything we believe in: access, representation, and the magic of choosing your own story.
