

MIST MYTHOLOGY

In the ancient Norse mythology, Valkyries soar across the battlefield, their presence a blend of both terror and awe. These divine warriors, often depicted as fierce and beautiful maidens, were the choosers of the slain warriors, to select those who had perished bravely in combat to reside in Valhalla.

Among these Valkyries, there was one known by the name of Mist, meaning "mist" or "fog" in Old Norse. Mist, like her namesakes, could appear as if shrouded in fog, emerging on the battlefield as a spectral vision that few could clearly see, and even fewer understood. Her story is one of silent observation and swift choice, moving among the clashing warriors, her eyes searching for those who displayed unmatched bravery and honor. Their mission, to ferry the honored dead to Valhalla was not only a service to the fallen but served as an immortal testament to the valor and bravery that defined the very essence of a warrior's spirit.

As a parallel from ancient myth to the modern day, there exists a noble mission mirroring the Valkyries' purpose, dedicated to searching for and recovering lost warriors at sea. The modern-day pathfinders, equipped not with divine powers but with technology and tireless dedication, scour the sea and ocean's depths for those who have fallen in more recent battles, ensuring that no soldier is left behind. Just as the Valkyries provided a sacred passage for the souls, our MIST is hoping to offer a semblance of peace to the families of lost soldiers by searching for their remains with honor and respect. Both missions, though centuries apart and differing in their realms of existence, share an essence: the act of remembering and honoring those who have given their all in the service of others.

In reflecting on the Valkyries' role and the noble mission of MIST, there emerges a timeless message: that in the remembrance of the fallen, we find a path to immortalize the highest ideals of humanity, enshrining in memory the valor of those who have passed and ensuring that their legacies continue to inspire for generations to come. The tale of Mist and her sacred duty not only enriches our understanding of mythology but also casts a light on the everlasting importance of honoring those who have made the ultimate sacrifice. At MIST.NGO we are inspired by this message and the myth of Valkyrie and promise to tirelessly pursue our mission.